Marriage skirts Arab-Jewish differences

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — President Hafez Assad is playing matchmaker for a group of young Jewish women, allowing them to emigrate to America after most were married by proxy to grooms they have never seen.

Syria forbids its eight million citizens to emigrate except under extraordinary circumstances and until recently travel restrictions on the 5,000-member Jewish community had been especially strict.

But Assad cut through the red tape and gave his personal order for the emigration permits "for which we are very grateful," said Selim Totah, 73-year-old leader of the Jewish community in Damascus.

Fifteen Jewish girls, most in their late 20s, are expected to fly to the United States next week after being married in a Damascus synagogue July 19.

Thirteen were married by proxy and have never seen their husbands. "They have communicated only in dreams," said Totah, who stood in for the grooms at the wedding and said he went "from bachelor to 13 brides. It's delightful."

Joseph Ackman of Baltimore, Md., one of two grooms who happened by at the right time and joined in the mass marriage, said he came here as a tourist to see holy places. But one Saturday in April he attended services at a Damascus synagogue.

"Afterward, a lot of people came up to me and started asking if I was married," said Ackman who is in his mid-30s and said he had not been able to find a girl in the United States.

"Maybe it's me. Maybe it's them, I don't know. Anyway what happened is a godsend," he said. "I'm very religious and a little old-fashioned and the girls here seem the same way.

"At first it was unnerving, girls picking at my sleeve and saying 'please marry me, Mr. Ackman,'" Ackman said.

A family introduced him to Shaila Kabariti and they decided to get married even though they only share a vocabulary of only about 100 words, a few English words she knows and some Arabic he has learned.

Totah said there were several hundred women who were "getting along in age and have little or no hope of getting married here."

Diplomats said more young men than women have managed to emigrate in recent years. Totah claims more girls than boys were born.

The other groom at the mass marriage was Charles I. Betesh, an electronic equipment importer from Brooklyn whose family long ago emigrated to the United States from Damascus.

"I'm a little older but I want a young girl who will be a good wife for me. This is a good deal," Betesh said.

Steven Shalom, a businessman from New York, came to Damascus this year to arrange the marriages. Totah gave him a list of unmarried girls and Shalom found 13 grooms willing to try a sight-unseen marriage. The proxy marriages were performed because the grooms could not afford to come to Damascus, Totah said. The emigration permits were granted on the basis the women were joining their husbands.

The community of Syrian Jews in the United States, who number 25,000 in the New York area alone, have been trying to improve conditions for the Syrian Jewish community, which lived in grim conditions before Assad came to power in 1970. Fearing the Jews were a potential fifth column for Israel, officials restricted their travel and property rights and kept them under surveillance.

Diplomats said the permission for Syrians to emigrate is part of a slow relaxation of controls. The last restrictions were lifted in January, allowing Jews to travel in Syria without special permits.

Escondido bookie raid

ESCONDIDO (AP) — Employes of two resorts and three other persons have been arrested in a bookmaking raid, police said today.

Wortham Thompson, 54, who works at La Costa Country Club, and Lloyd Vieaux, 60, who is employed at Escondido's Lake Wohlford, were booked Thursday night for investigation of bookmaking along with Linda Gross, 25, who shares a San Marcos residence with Thompson, and Larry Gorsuch, 27, and June Griffin, 23, who share a Vista address, officers said.

Escondido police, San Diego police and sheriff's vice investigators said they made the arrests after a two-month investigation.

Corona fire unchecked

News briefs

Kent conflict

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Sixty-one persons protesting planned construction near the Kent State University hill near which four students were killed in a 1970 antiwar demonstration were arrested early today as they tried to reoccupy the site.

Within hours of the arrests, construction equipment was moved into the fenced-in construction site, and a bulldozer began preparing the site on Blanket Hill.

PLO snubs offer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas today rejected President Carter's indirect offer of support for their participation in a Mideast peace conference if they abandoned a commitment to destroy Israel.

Spokesmen for Yasir Arafat's mainstream guerrillas and radicals of the Rejection Front vowed to continue terror operations in Israel.

Solomons quake

A major earthquake struck the Solomon Islands in the Pacific Ocean early today, the National Earthquake Information Service at Boulder, Colo., reported. There were no early reports of casualties or damage.

The quake occurred at 7:16 a.m. EDT and registered 7.3 on the Richter scale, spokesman Waverly Person said.

He said the quake was centered off the south coast of Bougainville in the Solomons and about 360 miles to the northwest of Guadalcanal.

Panama treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter pushed U.S. and Panamanian negotiators today to conclude their talks rapidly and produce a new treaty governing the Panama Canal.

The President, trying his hand at personal diplomacy, sat down in the Cabinet Room with the negotiators.

CONVICT FIREFIGHTERS CLEAR FIREBREAK AT CORONA

Shift in wind saves homes; 1,000 on lines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While the last embers were being put out and the insurance losses were being totaled in Santa Barbara, another major fire blazed out of control across Southern California's dry brush.

By daybreak, the fire in the Cleveland National Forest, in Riverside County west of Corona, had burned more than 1,000 acres.

Smoke from the Corona blaze was visible in Pomona Valley as were flames during the night.

The fire, touched off Thursday by what the U.S. Forest Service called an illegal campfire, was being whipped by breezes that eddied through the canyon.

No injuries were reported. About 400 citrus and avocado trees were burned, along with two small buildings.

About 70 families in Corona were evacuated Thursday, but shifting winds carried the fire away from their homes, sparing them the the devastation that destroyed or damaged 260 homes in Santa Barbara.

"This area has never burned before, so it's very hot and volatile brush out there," said Debbie Gold, a Forest Service spokeswoman.

The fire began in the Tin Mine Canyon area south of Corona and swept across to Hagador Canyon.

About 900 fire fighters had thrown a fire break around 50 per cent of the fire, but Ms. Gold said the winds "make it hard to put a finger on when it will be contained."

The Forest had first said that 1,000 acres had burned by late Thursday, but Ms. Gold later admitted that figure was high by several hundred acres. During the night and early Friday, about 300 acres burned, bringing the total for more than 1,000 acres, she said.

In addition to the fire fighters, seven bombers and five helicopters were dropping chemical retardants on the fire.

Meanwhile in Santa Barbara, the big fire was out and officials turned their attention to the danger of flooding in the denuded canyons and hillsides when the rainy season begins in two months.

7 handicapped campers drown in boating mishap

LAKE COWICHAN, Canada (AP) — Seven handicapped persons at a summer camp drowned when their pontoon boat overturned and they were trapped underneath by a wire fence meant to ensure their safety. Two victims were strapped in wheel chairs locked to the deck.

A lifeguard and counselor on the boat escaped but were unable to rescue any of the campers, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said after the tragedy Thursday.

Identities of the four women and three men killed were withheld until relatives could be notified. Autopsies and an inquest were ordered. Campers at Easter Seal Camp on Lake Cowichan in British Columbia, were riding on a 12-foot craft with a deck measuring 8-by 10-feet on two pontoons. The deck was surrounded by a three-foot-high wire fence designed to protect the passengers.

Authorities said the boat was heading for a water-skiing jamboree along the lakeshore when one of the pontoons caught under a swell as it made a sharp turn.

The five handicapped men and women sitting on the deck slid to the right side of the craft, which dipped into the water. The vessel then flipped over, throwing camp employes clear but trapping the seven victims inside the fence.

The buoyancy of the life-jackets which all the victims wore then forced them up against the deck of the craft, making the railing in effect a cage, authorities said.

Barbara Willett, Lions Club spokesman in Vancouver, said the boat was "practically guaranteed not to tip or roll, but it did."

Royal Canadian Mounted Police said the lake, about 45 miles northwest of Victoria, was calm "with only a slight ripple" when the group set off.

LUCKY

Frank Gilbert, 38, said today from his Birmingham, Ala., hospital bed he's ready to go back to work. Yesterday lightning struck near Gilbert in Riverside, Ala., touching 200 pounds of explosives with which he was working. The blast buried him under tons of debris. He survived with nothing more than bruises.

'Bomb' 2 Ontario homes with anti-fire chemicals

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

Two Ontario homes were "bombed" with gooey, red fire-fighting chemicals Thursday when a fire-fighting plane malfunctioned on takeoff from Ontario International Airport.

Ontario police said residents of 1445 E. Belmont Ave., and 1056 S. Mildred Ave., called to report that large amounts of the retardant had covered their lawns and houses about 5:30 p.m.

Police, upon contacting the California Division of Forestry office in Chino, learned a contracted forestry aircraft enroute to the Corona fire had experienced engine trouble.

The crew, police said, had no choice but to drop its 1,800-gallon liquid load to enable it to return to the airport for repairs.

Officials said seven fixed-wing tankers were used to right the fire Thursday, and they planned to add another today.

Ontario fire officials said they sent one truck and crew to the spill area to wash down the houses with high pressure hoses.

The majority of the "spill," they added, landed in a cornfield. The pilot aimed for the field to avoid the homes, they said.

The homes splattered are located in a rural area, with only three or four houses on that street, said firemen.

Mexican gang series starts Sunday in PB

A five-part series on criminal activities of two notorious California prison gangs, the Mexican Mafia and La Nuestra Familia, will begin Sunday on page one of the Progress Bulletin. Staff writer Tony Ault, after interviewing law enforcement officials, has detailed activities of gang members and associates statewide and in the valley. Valley authorities report violent crime, including execution-style slayings, is increasing because of the influence of prison gangs on parolees and street gang members. Investigators have provided documented evidence of the existence of the gangs, their structure, their interests — which center largely on illegal drug trafficking — and their enforcement tactics.

Nab pair in car-baby trade

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A Wichita couple who allegedly signed a contract to trade their 11-month-old daughter for a 1964 Buick have been arraigned on charges of child neglect.

Mitchell Coster, 20, and his 22-year-old wife, Vickie, were arrested by Sedgweick County Sheriff's officers after a three-man surveillance team watched the trade. Authorities said the two had taken the car for a drive, and then signed a contract for the trade.

Johnstown

Aftermath: 'deluge blues'

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Mental health officials say that it's good the beleaguered people of flood-ravaged Cambria County still have a lot of work to do digging out their homes, recovering their dead and restoring their everyday life.

But "eventually, weeks from now, people will have time to look around and take stock," said James Schoenfelder, director of the City-County Clinic here. "They'll realize that their neighbors are dead, that their possessions are gone.

"We anticipate a lot of problems as people try to deal with their losses," he added in an interview Thursday.

Agencies throughout the county are hoping that by anticipating those problems, they can prevent the suicides, alcoholism, drug abuse and other manifestations of mental problems that might grow out of after-the-deluge blues.

Cambria County's 39 caseworkers were deployed to mass-care centers within 24 hours of the July 20 flood to care for those who were visibly distressed by more than physical injury. They're still working 12-hour shifts.

"It's very much a Band-Aid approach," Schoenfelder said.

But workers from county clinics, the state Office of Mental Health and the National Institute of Menal Health have also made long-range plans for when the cost of the disaster sink in.

"We're beginning to see agitation, frustration, anger — all of those emotions," Schoenfelder said. "There will be more adjustment problems, more family problems, more behavior problems with kids."

The mental health workers fear they may encounter some resistance.

"One of the nuts we're going to have to crack is the notion that you have to be crazy to come to a mental health clinic for help," Schoenfelder said. "There are going to be a lot of people who need a couple of shots in the arm."

But he's confident that the city will be able to cope.

"I don't think we're a town about to go crazy," he said.

AIRLINE SCARE

Beth Gibson of Fullerton and John Yvon of Long Beach (in above photo), both 18, say they're okay, "just scared," after evacuation from a Los Angeles-bound American Airlines DC10 Thursday at Boston's Logan Airport. A fire in the tail engine of the jet forced an aborted takeoff and all 192 passengers were forced to slide down emergency chutes. In photo at right, firemen adjust a ladder to inspect the interior of the airliner. As passengers escaped, firemen covered the tail with foam.

Most burglaries can be prevented, says LAPD officer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Burglary is California's most common crime, but police say most entries are made by inexperienced "opportunists" who could be thwarted if homeowners were more careful.

"About 85 per cent of those arrested for burglary are 16 to 25 years old," says Officer Don Mazzola of the Los Angeles Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit.

"They're kids on the way home from school — or maybe they don't go to school. They'll walk up and knock on a door and if nobody answers, they'll start looking it over. If the house isn't easy (to enter), they'll go on to one that is."

All too often, says Mazzola, the house is unlocked or a window has been left open. The intruder gets in and out quickly — the average burglary takes less than three minutes — and the homeowner is minus a television set, stereo or some other belonging.

"Burglary always happens to someone else," says Mazzola. "People become interested in good security after they become victims."

The LAPD and other police departments throughout the state will inspect your home free of charge and offer recommendations on improving your security. Here are some general tips towards the same end:

—Keep shrubs and bushes around your house well trimmed so they don't offer cover for someone trying to force a window.

—All exterior doors should be solid-core construction with a one-inch deadbolt installed in the door.

—Sliding glass doors and windows of all types should be secured by drilling a hole in one section and using a sturdy nail to wedge the second section shut.

—Don't leave your key outside. The first place most potential burglars look is under the mat or above the door.

—Have good exterior lighting. There are low-wattage bulbs that don't use a great deal of electricity but eliminate shadows that can shield intruders.

—Mark your property by etching on your driver's license number. Then get a window sticker that will tell potential burglars that everything inside is personalized — and therefore harder to sell.

Mazzola says alarms should be considered, but only after the home has been thoroughly secured with good locks. The LAPD recommends an audible alarm that will alert neighbors and these types are available for around $250 at many retail stores.

Gag order imposed upon police officers in 'trash bag' case

RIVERSIDE (AP) — A Superior Court judge has imposed a gag order on law enforcement officials after Patrick Wayne Kearney pleaded innocent in three grisly "trash bag" murders.

Kearney entered the plea during a 15-minute hearing Thursday in Riverside Superior Court. He was then returned to his cell in county jail, where he is being held without bail.

The 37-year-old Redondo Beach man is charged with the slaying of Albert Rivera, 21, of Los Angeles, Arturo Marquez, 24, of Oxnard, and John O. LaMay, 17, of El Segundo.

However, Kearney reportedly has provided information to authorities concerning at least 28 other murders under investigation in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Diego and Imperial counties.

Superior Court Judge J. William Mortland granted the temporary restraining order preventing further public comments by law enforcement officials after it was was requested by Kearney's attorney, Jay Grossman of Riverside.

Witnesses and others under subpoena also are prohibited from discussing the case outside court.

Arguments on a permanent gag order will be heard Aug. 5.

Grossman also obtained a court order to permanently seal the transcript of the Riverside County Grand Jury, at least until the end of the trial.

Kearney's former roommate, David Douglas Hill, 34, who had been in custody in connection with the murders, was released July 14 after the grand jury refused to indict him.

Investigators have tagged the slayings the "trash bag murders" because most of the young, male victims were found nude in plastic garbage bags in isolated areas of the five counties. Most of the victims died from gunshot wounds in the head, and some of the bodies had been mutilated.

Old hotel in Ryde alive and swinging

RYDE (AP) — Here's Ryde, Pop. 60, Elev. 1, a lazy crossroads you'd miss in the span of a sneeze. So what were those sophisticated trumpet sounds doing wafting up from somewhere under the barroom floor?

"Oh, that," said bartender Earl Berg. "They're rehearsing for the vaudeville show this weekend. It's live."

"Sure, sure," nodded the dubious winebibber. "And I'm Glenn Miller." Berg stuck his chin out toward the basement door, inviting the skeptic to go look for himself.

Sure enough, down there in this barn of an old hotel, alongside the tranquil Sacramento River in a flyblown Delta levee town about 100 yards long, was a night club with performers rehearsing for a show.

It was an unlikely symptom of the resurrection of the hotel whose namesake first saw the light of day more than 90 years ago; when sidewheel and sternwheel steamers paddled commerce between Sacramento and San Francisco Bay area cities through some of the richest farm land in America.

Operators Dave and Donna Phillips aim to stick Ryde back on the map again by drawing hotel and supper business from San Francisco 60 miles to the west, Sacramento 30 miles to the east, and points in between and thereabouts.

"You should have seen this place July 4th," enthused the hairy bartender. "Full-up. They were waiting to get in."

The Ryde has 42 "livable" rooms, musty, high ceiling jobs, many with share-baths, rentable according to a spicy schedule of rates calculated to tap the swinger set.

The rooms, except for the "honeymoon suite," all go for the same rate — $10. For that price you and a companion can get a room from noon until 2 p.m., or a half-hour at other times. If you stay just 15 minutes, the management promises "not to tell anyone."

"Unescorted ladies welcomed," advises the schedule.

Nobody would be surprised if the schedule were accurate, not with the spicy history of the old river town.

"Quite a place in its day," old timers are liable to remark with a knowing nod and wink when discussing the Ryde.

WILLIAM BURKETT

Candidacy for governor announced

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Banker William A. Burkett has announced he will plans to run for the Democratic nomination for governor on a platform of reducing state taxes by $500 million.

The former state superintendent of banks said Thursday that Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. is "a dangerously ambitious politician."

The 64-year-old Pebble beach financier said at a news conference that if elected next year he would do "a better and more honest and businesslike job" as governor.

He said his tax rebate would be part of a 20-part program which he will outline during his campaign.

State briefs

Long Beach oil terminal

WASHINGTON (AP) — California Air Resources Board Chairman Tom Quinn says the Federal Energy Administration has confirmed for itself that the proposed Long Beach oil terminal would cut the state's natural gas supply.

But two California congressmen said the FEA has never made such a study on the proposed Standard Oil Co. of Ohio (Sohio) terminal for receiving Alaskan oil.

Quinn met federal energy and environmental officials Thursday. He also tried to allay the fears of some California congressmen who said state red tape was holding up a vital project.

No warning to burglar

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Police may enter a home without warning to arrest a burglar, the California Supreme Court has ruled.

"We hold that a police officer, having probable cause to believe a residence is being burglarized, need not comply with the 'knock and notice' requirements" of the state Penal Code, the court ruled Thursday.

The court said that "requiring the officer to identify himself, announce his purpose and demand entry in such circumstances would impede the officer in protecting the householder's privacy and property from the thief."

Besides, said the justices, it would endanger the police and others.

Vandals strike at UCLA, too

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vandals at UCLA have cut a wire that shut down the air conditioning system at the university's Neuropsychiatric Institute and have drained almost 350,000 gallons of water from two swimming pools.

But officials refused to link the incidents to striking steam engineers, who normally handle air conditioning and the water heating system.

School officials said Thursday it took two days to locate the wire that had cut air conditioning in the medical building. They also found the women's pool completely drained and the men's pool only half-full.

While the Operating Engineers Union members continue to man a picket line, supervisors have been filling in. A temporary restraining order was issued Thursday in an effort to break the strike, which is being supported by the Teamsters Local 911.

Truckers' accusations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The California Highway Patrol denies it is coercing judges to increase pressure on big-truck drivers who speed and tailgate.

The disclaimer came Thursday in the wake of accusations by truckers that the CHP was responsible for a new policy by San Joaquin County judges of accepting citizen complaints against truck drivers.

A CHP spokesman said the highway patrol has no power to force the judges to accept the complaints in court.

"Any truck driver complying with the law has nothing to worry about," he said.

Shots fired at policeman

RIVERSIDE (AP) — A passing motorist fired a shot at a motorcycle policeman who was involved in a controversial shooting death last month. But the officer escaped unharmed when the bullet richocheted off his motorcycle.

Officials said Officer Dan Gann, 30, was about a quarter-mile from the police station on his way home Thursday when a car pulled up next to him and one of its passengers fired the shot.

Gann was one of four Riverside officers placed on administrative leave last month after they shot and killed a man following a robbery. The shooting occurred when Gann and three other officers cornered a man they said failed to heed commands to halt.

Court administrator named

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The president of the state Bar Association has been named to a $49,166 job as administrative director of California's court system.

Ralph Gampell, 60, was approved Thursday by a vote of 5-1 by the California Judicial Council, said Steve Beuhl, executive assistant to Chief Justice Rose Bird, who chairs the council.

Gampell was the choice of Chief Justice Bird to head the Administrative Office of the Courts. Gampell was among those who supported Bird's nomination as chief justice during her confirmation hearings last March.

Psychiatrist pleads innocent

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — A prominent Palm Springs psychiatrist has pleaded innocent to charges that he hired a "hit man" to kill another doctor.

Dr. Morton Kurland, 44, entered the plea at his arraignment Thursday in an alleged scheme to hire the murder of Dr. James O'Connor of Yucca Valley.

Kurland and O'Connor have filed lawsuits against one another in a feud.

Kurland is charged with conspiracy to commit murder and burglary, soliciting another to commit murder and furnishing a controlled drug. He was arrested July 18 after allegedly paying $1,000 to an undercover policeman posing as a "hit man."

Fire victims' insurance not enough

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Many of the persons burned out of their well-to-do homes by this week's brush fire may not have enough insurance to cover the value of their losses, insurance experts say.

Most of the 234 homes destroyed were large, custom-built structures that had greatly appreciated in value in recent years and were worth $100,000 and up, according to records in the County Assessor's office.

The fire, touched off when an errant kite threw sparks from a power line into the dry brush Tuesday night, was finally put out Thursday, but not before it burned a wide swath through the exclusive residential areas in this seaside city.

The first 50 homeowners filing claims had policies paying only $50,000 to $70,000, according to Victor Slevin of the American Insurance Association of San Francisco, a central data-gathering organization.

"We are currently figuring that the insured loss will be in the area of $20 million," Slevin said. Damage to homes and property has been estimated at $40 to $50 million, leaving a wide gap.

Some of the difference may be eased by low interest, disaster relief loans, but that assistance will be more expensive and slower than full insurance coverage.

The problem arose because of skyrocketing Southern California land values.

"Last December, we said property values had been going up two per cent per month over the previous two or three years," said a spokesman for the County Assessor's office.

"But since January, they've been jumping $10,000 a month. We couldn't even put a percentage figure on it. A home that was $65,000 last fall was $90,000 to $95,000 by March or April," he said.

"We try to insist that people keep their insurance coverage current with market values, but prices have moved up so fast lately that a home can be current at the beginning of the year and be underinsured six months later," said a spokesman for Fireman's Fund of San Francisco.

Firemen's Fund had received 36 claims by Thursday afternoon, including 23 for total losses. The highest policy limit was $102,000 and most of the losses were for homes with a maximum policy of $65,000.

Maddy leading in fund-raising for governor

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assemblyman Ken Maddy of Fresno is the apparent leader in fund-raising among Republican contenders for governor in 1978.

Maddy reported Thursday that he has raised $471,465 for the 1978 campaign and had a campaign bank balance as of June 30 of $427,024.

He was the first contender to file reports due by Sunday on campaign contributions and expenditures during the first six months of 1977.

State Sen. John Briggs of Fullerton, the only Republican formally announced for governor, reported a $111,000 balance among three campaign committees.

Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger, San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson and Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis had not filed their reports by Thursday, and campaign aides said figures were not available.

But in a June 14 Associated Press survey of fund-raising, Younger's campaign reported $253,000, Wilson's $115,000, and Davis' $10,000.

Democratic Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who has not yet formally announced plans to seek re-election, also had not filed his report by Thursday. Brown's last report showed a deficit remaining from his 1976 campaign for president. He has had no fund-raising events since then.

Can IRS put bite on city, state pension plans?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has tapped a Missouri city's pension plan for 140 firemen for $50,000 in taxes, but the IRS hasn't gotten a penny from the huge California state employes pension system, which is in the same legal position as the small Missouri plan.

Both of these pension plans are not exempt from taxes in the eyes of the IRS. But the Missouri IRS office has been pressing the issue, while the California office apparently has not.

For years the IRS paid little attention to state and municipal pension plans. But that may change if the IRS' interpretation of some old tax laws and the new federal pension law is upheld by the courts.

Confusion over just what the law means for the more than 6,000 governmental pension plans and their nine million participants appears certain to end up in the courts.

But if the IRS position in the case of the fire fighters' pension fund of St. Joseph, Mo., prevails, there could be hundreds of millions of dollars in federal taxes owed by pension funds and millions more owed by the plan's participants.

The St. Joseph case revolves around whether a city or state pension plan has to file formally with the IRS for tax-exempt status — as corporate pension plans must.

The IRS — at least the IRS regional office in St. Louis — says governmental plans must file. If they don't, the plans' investment income is taxable and the government's contributions to the pension plan are immediately taxable to the covered employes.

"We are not covered by the ... law," said Jerry Mogg, a certified public accountant who advises the St. Joseph city government.

"There's no need to qualify nor any purpose for it," says Albert A. Weinberg, consulting actuary to the Illinois legislative committee on pensions.

No one, including the IRS, knows how many governmental plans have qualified and how many have not.

A check of several city and state plans showed no pattern.

Major New York City and New York state plans have qualified. The 550,000-member California Public Employes Retirement System has not. Neither have the employe pension plans of Chicago, Atlanta, Illinois or Connecticut.

The only IRS office concentrating on governmental plans is the one in St. Louis, which has responsibility for St. Joseph.

About six years ago, the IRS demanded that the city pay taxes on the investment income of its fire fighters pension plan. The plan covers about 140 firemen and sends out pension checks to 42 who are retired.

"It sort of looks like they've just arbitrarily picked the St. Joseph's firemen's plan," said Mark Abels, an aide to Missouri Sen. Thomas Eagleton.

The city paid up.

"Everybody else has kind of ignored them," Mogg. "Unfortunately, St. Jo didn't. St. Joseph may be the one who has to take them through the court because they have our money."

The city has now paid a total tax tab of about $50,000, and Mogg says the city has filed for refunds, requests that are now on appeal.

In addition to the 42 retired who receive pensions, the St. Joseph plan pays survivors' annuities to 34 widows and orphans. The pension fund had a balance of $397,705 at the end of the last fiscal year.

In comparison, the California state plan with about 550,000 covered employes had investment income of $520 million last year. It is impossible to determine what tax rate might be applied in the California case, but the tax bill — if the St. Joseph case is followed as an example — could be hundreds of millions of dollars for that one state for one year.

Officials of the California pension system say the IRS has not pressured them to file for tax-exempt status.

"We have never filed," said one official. "We consider ourselves qualified."

California officials say the plan would have to refile for approved status several times a year, because the state legislature constantly makes changes in the plan.

In Illinois, Weinberg said most of the state's pension plans, including Chicago's, "automatically qualify because of their government aspect."

But the consultant, who helped write many of Illinois pension laws, admitted: "We get flack from time to time. Some IRS agent gets the idea we ought to file."

Qualified status with the IRS does not mean a pension plan is without problems. For example, the New York City employe funds are qualified with the IRS. But the city's pension funds have a massive unfunded liability — totaling about $8 billion, according to one accounting. This liability is made up of the total pensions the city has promised to pay its employes in the future, but for which money has not yet been put aside.

And as John Schwartz, of the New York city plan said:

"Even if we were not qualified — and we are — we're doing everything as if we met all the rules."

Connecticut has a large pension plan for state employes. Asked if it is qualified as tax-exempt by the IRS, Henry J. Rigney, chief of the retirement division of the state comproller's office, said:

"We haven't gone through the qualification process lately. I'm told there's a qualification letter dated 1963 .... We haven't found it."

Survivors of execution-style slayings in Miami under guard

MIAMI (AP) — Two people who survived the execution-style slayings of their six companions are under police guard today.

Margaret Wooden, 24, who escaped the killers by feigning death after a bullet grazed her head, was placed under police protection Thursday as a key witness.

Johnny Hall, 45, who was at the ranch-style house for a rock band rehearsal on Wednesday when the killers struck, was in serious condition with a gunshot wound to the head. Police were guarding his hospital room.

"The female victim is being guarded by police," said a spokesman for Dade County police. "We are not giving any information on her location or her interviews with investigators. She's the only witness we have at this time."

The shootings took place in a middle-class, racially-mixed section seldom troubled by crime.

Neighbors reported seeing three men leaving the area at the time of the shooting, but police have little evidence.

"We're not even sure how many subjects we're looking for," said a spokesman.

Investigators said robbery was a possible motive, but an expensive stereo system was left behind. A television set was moved but left near the door, police said.

Police earlier quoted Miss Wooden as saying she had been alone in the home of Livingston Stocker when a man came to the door saying he was a repairman for Florida Power & Light Co.

She told police the man bound her and let an unknown number of other persons into the house.

As Stocker and others arrived, they were captured, bound and shot. It was unclear whether the victims arrived singly or in a group. Five bodies were found in one bedroom, a sixth in another. All were tied with neckties and handkerchiefs.

Miss Wooden fled to a neighbor's house when the men left, her ear bleeding and her hands still bound with a necktie.

"She was trembling all over," said the neighbor, Julius Davis.

Davis told his wife, "There are lots of people shot next door." She called police. An anonymous caller also reported the killings.

Hall was found wandering around the front room, wounded and dazed.

Stocker's rented 1977 Thunderbird, apparently taken by the killers, was found a few miles away Thursday afternoon.

Police identified the dead as: Stocker, 33; John Holmes, 26; Henry Clayton, 35; Gilbert Williams, 37, and Michael Miller, 24, Stocker's nephew and Miss Wooden's common-law husband. All were from Miami. Police said the sixth man had not been identified.

Davis said Stocker worked for Sears Roebuck and Co. and "ran a quiet house."

Officer Lonnie Lawrence, who has lived and worked in the area, said it was a quiet neighborhood, "a middle-class area, a low-crime area, with no real problems I can remember."

House opens debate on energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House started work today on President Carter's energy program and Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said the plan comes to the floor just about as Carter outlined it in an April 20 message to Congress.

"Ninety per cent of his package is there," O'Neill told reporters. "The President should be extremely happy

The House Rules Committee cleared the bill for floor action Thursday night under guidelines which could mean several major floor fights on amendments challenging the administration package.

Only preliminary debate, no voting, was on the House's schedule for the day. Most of next week has been set aside in order to finish the legislation and send it to the Senate by next Friday.

Meanwhile, House Democrats and their aides were briefed on the bill in a closed session by presidential energy adviser James R. Schlesinger and Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, the chairman of the House energy committee.

Major provisions of the legislation include a tax on cars which use fuel inefficiently, a credit for weatherizing homes, a tax on crude oil to force conservation, continued federal price controls on natural gas, but at a higher level than is now the case, and a major overhaul of electric utility rates.

In addition, a special House energy committee, which reviewed the legislation but had no authority to change work done by other panels, recommended a doubling of the current four-cent federal gasoline tax.

Republicans, charging that Democrats ignored their views while the legislation was being drafted, are planning to seek approval for their own energy legislation.

Man, three juveniles held in house burglary

A 20-year-old Ontario man and three juveniles were arrested Thursday night after burglars reportedly broke into a home on Phillips Street, Ontario, police reported.

Police said that a resident in the 400 block of west Phillips Street called officers to the area about 9:45 p.m. after he saw what he believed to be four youths breaking the bedroom window of a nearby home.

The resident told officers that the four were still inside.

Police arrived and surrounded the home and ordered the suspected burglars outside.

Arrested at the scene was Panfillo Gonzales Ramos, 20, 1012 S. Sultana Ave., Ontario, and the three juveniles, ages 14, 15 and 16.

Ramos was booked in the West End jail for investigation of burglary while the three youths were transported to juvenile hall for disposition.

Motorcyclist hurt in Chino collision

A 29-year-old San Dimas man was listed in guarded but stable condition this morning after his motorcycle collided with a car at East End and Francis avenues in Chino Thursday.

The motorcyclist, Marvin J. Marshall of 1132 Wehner Lane, was rushed to Montclair Doctors Hospital shortly after the 4 p.m. accident.

The California Highway Patrol said the motorcycle collided with a car driven by Zoe Ann Pedford, 27, of 2162 Victoria Way, Chino.

There's a mouse in White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Does the nation have a First Mouse?

If so he must be among those little rascals occupying the White House.

Members of the White House staff aren't amused by the unauthorized residents and go after them with traps and insecticides. Insect spray is favored, however, because the mouse lobby says traps are cruel.

Just this week, one of the White House rodents almost caused a diplomatic embarrassment, threatening to disrupt the visit of Italy's prime minister. The mouse was discovered, deceased, just before the arrival of the prime minister. The remains were quickly removed.

There apparently has been a First Mouse with his shadow government rustling behind the White House walls for years, even though a 1952 renovation project at the presidential mansion supposedly chased away the rodent colony.

Now, White House workers say the mouse population is growing, probably because they've been disturbed by construction of the city's subway system. White House workers say the mice get past the sophisticated security system that guards the President and his family, getting in through air ducts.

Nobody seems to know if the mice have made themselves known to President Carter.

Man steals truck, robs gas station

A man who stole a small truck in Montclair later robbed a service station in Ontario, police said.

The robbery was reported about 9:20 p.m., only minutes after a Montclair resident reported his truck with a camper shell had been stolen.

Police said a robber drove into the service station at Mountain Avenue and Mission Boulevard in the stolen truck, displayed a small handgun and told the attendant, "This is a robbery. Don't make it a murder." The attendant handed the robber a small amount of cash, and the robber sped off in the vehicle.

The gunman was described as white, 5 feet 10, 170 pounds, with dark hair. He wore a blue beanie and a blue and white bandana to cover his face.

Youth on bike struck by car

A 14-year-old youth was injured Thursday afternoon when a car crossing Central Avenue at Philadelphia Street collided with his bicycle.

The victim, Don Seaton of 11546 Central Ave., was listed in satisfactory condition at Fontana's Kaiser Hospital.

Chino police said the boy was riding his bicycle southbound on Central Avenue about 5 p.m. when a car driven by Alfie Muckols, 77, of 12955 Yorba Ave., Chino, crossed Central Avenue.

The impact knocked the youth to the ground, police said.

Judge faces recall vote for remarks in rape case

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Dane County Judge Archie Simonson, whose remarks linking sexual assault with permissiveness and provocative clothing touched off a national controversy, will get a chance to plead his case before the voters in a Sept. 7 recall election.

The election was scheduled on Thursday after certification of petitions. Deputy County Clerk Patricia Roller said 35,319 of the 36,343 signatures filed Monday by the Dane County Committee to Recall Judge Simonson were valid, exceeding the 21,049 required for a recall election.

The furor began May 25 at a disposition for a 15-year-old boy who had earlier pleaded no contest to delinquency in a second-degree sexual assault case. The youth was one of three accused in an attack on a 16-year-old girl in a high school stairwell last November.

Before ordering the boy to spend a year at home under court supervision, Simonson referred to what he described as provocative clothing worn by women, and to what he said was a sexually permissive atmosphere in Madison.

"Are we supposed to take an impressionable person, 15 or 16 years of age, who can respond to something like that, and punish that person severely because they react to it normally?" Simonson was quoted as asking.

Bookstore robbed 2nd time in week

Ontario police are seeing a robber who for the second time in a week robbed the Ritz Adult Bookstore and Theater at 136 N. Euclid Ave., Ontario, Thursday night.

Police said the robber entered the business about 8:30 p.m. and placed his hand in his waistband, simulating a weapon.

Six arrested in beating of youth

Six young men were arrested Thursday night in Pomona and booked in connection with the beating of a 17-year-old youth.

The six, whose names were not immediately available, were booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

The incident occurred in the 2400 block of Angela Street. The victim was attacked by several young men armed with boards, chains and tire irons, police reported. Several shots also were reported, but no firearm was found. The victim was released after treatment at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Police said the youth was the victim of theft recently and they believe the attack on him was related to that theft.

Open letter to Paris coin bandits

How do you get rid of $3 million loot?

PARIS (AP) — Somewhere today four bandits sit and consider their loot — 17 tons of shiny new coins, worth $3.54 million. They may know what they're going to do with the heavy haul, but to others it's a mystery.

"You can't buy a chateau, a car or even a pair of crocodile shoes with bags of change," the newspaper L'Aurore reminded them in an open letter. "And even if you go out to celebrate your coup, the owner of the smallest cafe will start to suspect before you drop the 10th coin on the bar."

"Please write to us and tell us how on earth you are going to get rid of it," the newspaper suggested.

The gangsters hijacked a semitrailer truck carrying the coins as it left the Gare de Lyon railroad station here Thursday, headed for the Paris headquarters of the Bank of France. The coins were in a container that had been shipped by rail overnight from a mint in southern France.

Identical to thousands of other containers on the French rail system, it was deliberately left unguarded so it would not attract attention. It was labeled "fabricated metal" and, the bank said, it was insured only for the value of the metal in the coins, not their monetary value, which is higher.

The loot was largely in 10-franc pieces, each worth about $2. They were recently put into circulation to replace notes and have proved unpopular with the public because they are smaller than coins of half the value and are confusing in a pocketful of change.

The driver, Jean Trottin, 51, said he simply rolled his truck into the Gare de Lyon freight yard, the container was loaded onto the rig in 15 minutes, and he drove out, unarmed and alone.

The hijackers, who officials said must have been following a carefully devised plan based on inside information, got an unexpected break when another truck stalled in front of Trottin's rig.

The gang grabbed the two drivers as they talked, drove off with them and the truck and released them 30 minutes later. Meanwhile, one of the bandits disappeared with the truck into the traffic of Paris.

SENTENCED — Former Louisiana Congressman Richard Tonry puts on coat outside federal court in New Orleans Thursday where he was sentenced for violations of a new campaign law.

Tonry gets year, fine of $10,000

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Richard Tonry has become the first ex-congressman to be sentenced to prison for violating the recent Federal Campaign Act.

Tonry, who resigned Louisiana's 1st District seat under fire in May, was sentenced to a year in prison and $10,000 in fines Thursday by a federal judge who said the former representative deserved more than just a slap on the wrist.

Tonry pleaded guilty earlier this month to four counts of breaking a federal law that forbids a candidate to promise jobs to campaign contributors, or to accept contributions exceeding $1,000 per individual.

The 42-year-old Chalmette attorney, who had once studied to be a priest, was also given three years probation by U.S. Dist. Judge Charles Schwartz Jr. and was forbidden from running for public office during that time.

In return for the guilty plea, U.S. Atty. Gerald Gallinghouse dropped more serious felony charges, such as obstruction of justice.

In handing down the sentence, Judge Schwartz, who earlier sentenced Tonry's chief fund raiser to four months in prison in the case, said Tonry could have gone to prison for 18 years and been fined $170,000 had he not plea bargained.

Tonry resigned from Congress during a growing scandal over fraud in the Oct. 2 Democratic primary runoff. He won nomination by 184 votes but an investigation turned up about 400 fake ballots. More than two dozen poll commissioners later pleaded guilty to stealing votes for Tonry.

A special election was called to fill the vacancy. Tonry ran to win his seat back "fair and square," but lost the Democratic primary by 10,000 votes.

"I was surprised," Tonry told newsmen after the court session.

He said he would not run for public office again.

Summer camps

The Claremont YMCA is offering two camps for area youngsters.

Camp Round Meadow is open to youngsters, grades three to six, Saturday to Aug. 6. This is located in the Barton Flats area of the San Bernardino Mountains.

Activities include hiking, swimming, crafts, archery, and chapel programs. The cost is $76.50 for members and $85.50 for non-members.

Camp Fox is open to boys in grades seventh through ninth. It will be held Monday through Aug. 8 on Catalina Island. Activities include water skiing, boating, spear fishing, hiking, and campfires. The cost is $79.50 for YMCA members and $89.50 for non-members.

Check seminar

The American Institute of Banking will conduct a seminar Aug. 9 at the Pomona First Christian Church on "check kiting."

The session, lasting from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., will cover these areas: what is "check kiting?"; how does it work?; and how is it stopped or prevented once detected?

The instructor will be M. P. Romano, assistant vice president of the United California Bank. For reservations, persons may phone Nancy DeWolf at 622-1231.

Las Vegas trip

Senior citizens in Chino are invited to a three-day, two-night trip to Las Vegas Aug. 8 to 10.

The cost is $41.50 per person, and includes hotel lodging, bus transportation and two meals.

Persons interested in making the trip may call Debbie Chiniaeff at the Chino Parks and Recreation Department, 627-7344, for reservations.

Annual picnic

Former residents of Bloomington, Ill., are invited to a picnic Aug. 7 at noon at the Ganesha Park in Pomona.

This 31st annual picnic will again be headed by Mrs. Gladys Briggs of Chino. For more information, persons may phone Mrs. Briggs at 628-8172.

Pomona board okays $700,000 in funding for school projects

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Pomona school board has approved funding for $700,000 in new programs for the 1977-78 school year.

With various trustees expressing their pleasure and displeasure at the allotments for funding new programs in the district, the final ax fell as follows:

—Adjustments in elementary class size were funded to the amount of $75,000 which, according to District Supt. Charles Carpenter, will be used to hire teachers at four or five of the district's elementary schools and reduce the size of first grade classes. Selection will be made on need as determined by high class size and low achievement levels.

—Increased funds in the amount of $43,000 were supplied for special education which Carpenter said would go somewhat for reduced class size but the bulk of which would see additional work done in prescription and diagnosis of children with learning deficiencies.

The funding level was noticeably disappointing to trustee Francis Livingston who had previously asked that the district begin an extensive $750,000 program in the field of special education.

—The board funded expansion of the health clinic at Hamilton School in the amount of $6,000 to provide additional supplies and equipment.

—The board allotted $35,000 for additional clerical help at the district's 20 elementary schools. Carpenter noted that too much clerical work was being required of principals and, while more money could be used in this area, it is a starting point.

—Air conditioning won a $35,000 approval by the board, upped from $25,000 by a motion from trustee Eugene Whitlock who asked that $5,000 be pulled from both the data processing proposal and the fine arts program to provide the increases. The air conditioning priorities will be for the district's older portable classrooms, many of which become insufferable during the summer months.

—The district's data processing future won a $135,000 endorsement by the board following Monday's establishment of a $500,000 computer fund. Should the district move ahead with its own computer operation, experts have predicted massive long-range savings over the next several years.

—Bilingual education received a $41,000 boost from the special funds with the money all designated to supply additional bilingual help in the classroom. Whitlock moved that the money be spent "in the classroom and not here (at the Education Center)." His motion carried unanimously.

—A $135,000 appropriation went to building maintenance and safety which will bring the amount spent on this area to well over $1 million next year. Board President Don Donnelly suggested that a letter detailing these expenditures be sent to the district's insurance broker for use in acquiring liability insurance.

—The long-awaited fine arts program was finally funded in the amount of $195,000, the largest single funding of the $700,000 block. While the final program did not include administrative personnel initially requested, acting Assistant Supt. for Curriculum Ralph Taylor noted that, "The board has given us the teachers and that is the most important part."

Taylor said the new program would provide, primarily on the elementary level, a varied fine arts curriculum in music, visual arts, drama and dance while also stressing the multicultural aspect of the fine arts.

MALL STORES DEMOLISHED

Workmen stand atop old Pomona Mall shops that are being torn down on the south side of the mall east of Garey Avenue. The old stores, which includes the former Owl Drug Store at the corner of Garey, will be replaced by a parking lot. The mall itself between Garey and Locust Street will be torn out and replaced by a fully developed street. In the background is the Home Savings and Loan Association building on the west side of Garey.

Walnut council okays annexation of lighting district

By DAVID READER
PB Correspondent

The annexation of four lighting districts in new residential sections of southwest Walnut into the Los Angeles County lighting maintenance system was approved Wednesday night by Walnut City Council.

Prior to this action, individual development companies had the responsibility of installing the lighting standards and maintaining them.

The council discussed the possibility of the city selecting a site for a new Walnut branch of the county library. The current facility in Walnut is housed in a store in the shopping center on Pierre Road.

Council members expressed displeasure with what they felt was the county Regional Library Council's lack of action on getting plans for a library building in Walnut.

Mayor Richard Laughter said that under the current general plan for the city, any large enough parcel of land would be suitable for a library site, but that it was not up to Walnut to purchase the land, but rather the county.

The council directed the city staff to communicate by letter with both county Supervisor Peter Schabarum and the library council requesting action on the library matter.

Veterans' services expanded

The State Employment Development Department office in Pomona has expanded its services to veterans.

Oscar G. Laubbacher, Pomona manager, announced the appointment of Tobby P. Baca Sr., formerly employed by the City of Pomona, as coordinator of the Disabled Veterans' Outreach Program (DVOP).

Under the direction of Peter Robles Jr., veterans' employment representative, Baca will assist disabled Vietnam era veterans in finding careers. To assist the government in meeting its commitment, some 200 disabled Vietnam era veterans have been hired statewide by the department to provide other veterans with intensive job development and placement services.

Laubbacher urged veterans in need of employment services to visit his office for assistance.

Wynberg given 90 days

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Henry Wynberg, a car salesman who is more widely known as the one-time escort of actress Elizabeth Taylor, has been sentenced to 90 days in jail.

The jail sentence stems from Wynberg's pleading no contest on June 27 to a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor in connection with a sex case involving high school girls.

Wynberg also was ordered Monday by Municipal Court Judge Jacqueline Weiss to pay a $1,000 fine. He was placed on five years' probation.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Harvey Giss said Wynberg, 43, had been charged with 10 counts involving furnishing drugs and alcohol to high school coeds and having sexual relations with them.

Wynberg was taken to county jail to begin serving his sentence.

Turmoil not new in Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The first white ball clicked off the tee not long after dawn Wednesday at Birnam Wood Golf Course as traces of smoke lazily drifted overhead from the disastrous fire just a few miles to the east.

The gusty winds, a problem for more than 500 fire fighters and the 10 or so early morning golfers alike, had settled down to a gentle, intermittent sea breeze.

Downtown, where a few businesses were closed, a thin film of soot covered cars and streets.

Almost all of the 200 homes destroyed were in the luxury category — some worth a quarter million dollars or more. Much of the talk around town centers on the gross inconvenience and treasures lost, not of poverty and hopelessness.

Evacuation centers set up around the fire were largely empty. But many of the city's 78 hotels and motels, including the historic seaside Biltmore Hotel, were jammed with the homeless well-to-do.

The fire bypassed the center of town, where lower income, largely old-time residents live.

Fires and disasters are not new to this coastal town of 75,000.

In 1926, the city's downtown was almost destroyed by an earthquake. Residents rebuilt the city in mission style architecture with tight zoning restrictions which still prevail.

A 1969 offshore oil well blowout blackened beaches and triggered a citizen outcry which gave birth to more environmental restrictions.

A proposal to put parking meters on downtown streets was turned down more than 10 years ago, because, as one resident put it, "they aren't picturesque."

The only downtown traffic lights are along U.S. 101, which runs between the city's white beaches and the town.

Santa Barbara was founded as a mission community in 1782 by Father Junipero Serra, and has often been called the most Old Spanish of any Southern California city.

Eastern millionaires studded the hills around unincorporated Montecito on the southern edge of town with mansions in the 1920s.

Today, Chamber of Commerce vice president Scot Stewart estimates that the city of 75,000 is losing its reputation as a retirement community with an influx of younger working people.

But the wealth of Monteceito and the well-to-do areas remain.

Tourism accounts for about 35 per cent of the economy, and most of the visitors come from Los Angeles 100 miles down the coast.

The nearby University of California at Santa Barbara and a sprinkling of "think tank" industries, mostly space-age electronics related to the air base, support a working crowd who are anxious to protect the town's tranquility.

The 14,000 students at the university campus at Isla Vista just to the north are mostly concerned with their studies, sports and fraternity life.

Last year voters passed legislation intended to set an 85,000 population ceiling on the town, seen as an island in the midst of Southern California glitter.

"We're still the way we used to be," reads the tourist ads for the city.

WEARY FIREFIGHTERS TAKE NAP BREAK AT WESTMONT COLLEGE

Water weed proliferates

EL CENTRO (AP) — Hydrilla, a fast-growing noxious weed, is clogging 700 miles of canals in the Imperial Valley and threatens to take over the area's 65-acre equalization pond, authorities say.

"The pond was empty until April when we turned the first water in there," said Imperial County Agriculture Commissioner Claude Finnell on Wednesday. "Now a third of the pond is solid with hydrilla."

They miss Joe

By NANCY SHULINS
Associated Press Writer

POMFRET, Vt. (AP) — Some take much and leave little. But folks here still pay tribute to a peppery, penniless French Canadian Indian named Joe Ranger — now 12 years dead — whose legacy was a neighborly notoriety.

The gap-toothed face of one of Vermont's most photographed residents grins out at visitors from picture frames on mantlepieces throughout this southern Vermont village of 620 persons.

His ramshackle house falls slowly into decay on the stretch of dirt his neighbors named Joe Ranger Road. The ancient tools, old boots and dusty books — his only material legacy — were removed for safekeeping.

Mildred Burns, his nearest neighbor, has the old phonograph. Otis Wheeler, his best friend, keeps his diaries.

Down the road in Hartford, Mrs. Henri Dupuis keeps his birdcage in her living room.

"I never knew Joe personally," she said apologetically. "But when I went up there after he died and saw it, I had to take it.

"It was just the idea of having a little bit of Joe."

When Ranger's most portable possessions had been taken, neighbors started on the house and barn. The barn, now owned by the town, is minus windows, doors and beams.

Ranger's reputation began as a child, Wheeler said. "He'd be writing on the chalkboard, and he'd start sidling down toward the door. Before the teacher knew it, Joe'd be half way home." He lasted three terms.

Ranger, who did odd jobs, bought his homestead in 1911. Neighbors soon gave up trying to change his housekeeping habits.

"He cleared a path through the mess, and that's how he got in the door," Mrs. Burns said with a shudder. "When he ate, he'd have just enough room on the table for his plate, and when he finished, his cats would lick it."

But Ranger's hygiene theories didn't keep neighbors from gathering around his pot-bellied stove to hear stories.

"He chewed tobacco, and he didn't care what he said to you. When tourists used to stop and ask him where the road went, he'd say, 'It doesn't go anywhere — just stays right here.' My, I miss him," Mrs. Burns said.

When he wasn't mowing hay with a scythe, telling stories or tending his garden, Ranger sat in the fields and sang to the cows. When the work was done, he joined neighbors who brought their picnics to Joe Ranger Road to drink in the view from his pasture.

Ranger could be disagreeable, residents admit reluctantly. Once he pulled up a neighbor's melon patch after an argument. But there were good deeds, too, like the autumn night Ranger loaded two maple trees into a wheelbarrow and planted them in Wheeler's front yard.

That was the year Ranger began to slow down some, friends said. One winter night in 1964, just six months short of 90, Ranger lit the potbellied stove and sat in his chair with his cat for the last time.

Years later, in the pasture where Ranger sang to his cows, the chirping of birds and crickets and the swish of apple trees were recorded for posterity.

The record, "Sounds from Joe Ranger's House," never made the charts. But — like the birdcage — it was a little bit of Joe.

We think our taxes are much too high

NEW YORK (AP) — At the request of H & R Block, the income tax people, and with their money too, The Roper Organization, the polling people, are finally able to tell us what we think about the income tax system.

"Over half of all taxpayers think their own federal income taxes are 'excessively high,' as opposed to 'about right' or 'very reasonable,' " the report tells us.

You might have known that, of course, but did you know the percentages are 55, 31 and 10? Or that 7 of 10 Americans are against higher gasoline or heating oil taxes? Or that 55 per cent approve higher liquor taxes?

The authority of computer numbers is remarkable, because now that the fractions and decimals and percentages buttress what we all have felt for years, our feelings become somehow more authentic.

It wasn't easy. Roper interviewed 2,003 individuals and analyzed their answers geographically, educationally, occupationally, politically, maritally, and by age, sex, color and income. Four hundred pages, two volumes.

But sometimes the numbers, no matter how clean and precise, are not that easy to add up, or so it would seem from the conclusion on page 10, that "The public would welcome a call for tax reform," and the statement on page 29:

"Despite a general indictment of the income tax system as unfair, and a high lack of understanding of how to fill out a tax return, demand for tax reform and simplification has relatively low priority in the general scheme of things."

Northern forests invaded by voracious caterpillars

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The forests of the northern United States are suffering their worst infestation of leafchewing caterpillars in more than 20 years, scientists say.

Two kinds of caterpillars are eating their way through strands of oak, maple, spruce and fir from Indiana to Maine this summer, said the Center for Short-Lived Phenomena in Cambridge.

The center is following the course of the destructive bugs and predicts that both kinds will die out within a few years. But behind them, researchers said, the caterpillars will leave a swathe of dead trees that will be susceptible to forest fire.

The spruce budworm and forest tent caterpillar come and go in cycles that cover several years, said researcher Gary Hirschkron. But he said this is the first time since 1955 that the two kinds of insects have appeared in quantity at the same time.

"Predicting caterpillar infestations is a complex mathematical process," said Hirschkron. "People are building computer models to find out why it happens. We don't know whether these two infestations are related."

Though not nearly as widespread, a third kind of caterpillar swarmed over a 20-square-mile area around Columbus, Ga.

The worst pest, the spruce budworm, has killed record numbers of trees this year in Michigan, Minnesota and Ontario, the center said. The infestation of the caterpillar, which eats balsam fir and white spruce, spreads from Minnesota to Maine and New Brunswick.

Scientists said the budworms, which pick mostly on mature trees, probably are nearing their peak in New England and are dying out in Minnesota. But they said the budworms will live on until their food supply is depleted.

The scientists said that the forest tent caterpillar's natural enemy, the flesh fly, should be able to control the spread in Indiana by 1978.

Japan TVs win court ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese television manufacturers won a major victory Thursday when a federal appeals court ruled that the United States cannot impose a special duty on their products.

The United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals overturned a decision by a New York customs court which had said the Treasury Department must set the duties — thereby raising the price — on electronic products exported from Japan. The duty never has been imposed.

Zenith Radio Corp., which brought the suit, argued that the Japanese, were indirectly subsidizing exports because the nation imposed a special tax on electronic products kept in Japan while not taxing electronic products exported to other countries.

It argued that the United States therefore must tax Japanese imports to offset the allegedly unfair advantage this would give Japanese electronic imports.

However, the appeals court agreed by a 3-2 vote with the Justice Department position that Congress never intended to have the so-called countervailing duty law, which provides for penalty duties to offset foreign government subsidies, over such cases

The appeals court said the Japanese tax is a levy on a shipment of specified electronic products for consumption in Japan. The same products are exempt from the tax when shipped for export.

"It is undisputed that the tax is internal and that the application of the tax to internal shipments, while refusing to apply it to exports, is the sole governmental action which ... created a countervailable bounty," the court said.

The panel ruled that the United States did not apply the law against other countries.

Dissenting judges said that the court was wrong in simply looking at the economic results of the tax and argued that the law requires the countervailing duty against Japan.

Governments fear gunman's finger on nuclear triggers

EDITOR'S NOTE: The global spread of nuclear power leaves the risk of gunmen as well as governments laying hands on atomic triggers. There have been threats of attack on nuclear facilities, and there are fears that toxic nuclear fuels could be hijacked in transit. A drive is on to tigthen security. In the fourth of a five-part series, AP diplomatic correspondent Arthur L. Gavshon tells of past mistakes and future perils.

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort is under way in many nations to tighten the security of nuclear facilities against dangers of attack, sabotage and hijacking.

The United States has taken the lead at a time when world trade and traffic is expanding rapidly in nuclear plants and in fuels 20,000 times more poisonous than a cobra's bite.

Antisabotage precautions have been upgraded at every military and nuclear installation in this country during the past year.

This is being done partly as an overdue precaution and partly as an example for foreign users of nuclear power.

"Without offering gratuitous advice or intervening in national security systems, we are making much of our techniques, our instrumentation, our training available," Gen. Edward Giller said in an interview.

Giller is chief of the safeguards section in the Energy Research and Development Administration. He went on: "Here we are installing more and more automated systems for measuring, weighing, recording materials. These include tamper-proof devices, sensors which can detect even the tiniest particles of radioactive substances which people might try to smuggle out of a plant."

Training in nuclear security techniques has been greatly expanded by the United States recently for Americans and foreigners. Members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Central Intelligence Agency are forming special squads to work on matters involving the whole range of nuclear security. Inspectors from the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency and officials from the 30 countries which have bought U.S. equipment and fuel come here to learn the newest development in safeguard technology.

Through the 1970s, there have been between 55 and 65 acts of international terrorism a year. There already have been some incidents involving nuclear power or facilities.

—Oct. 27, 1970, a 14-year-old schoolboy in Orlando, Fla., sent a letter to city authorities demanding $1 million and threatening to blow up the city with an H-bomb. He enclosed a diagram of what experts said was a workable bomb. Local police were set to deliver the money when the youngster was found and arrested. It was a hoax; there was no bomb.

—Trotskyite urban guerrillas temporarily occupied Argentina's Atucha reactor in 1973 while it was being built.

—A would-be saboteur, protesting the proposed establishment of a nuclear reactor in Massachusetts, wrecked a meteorological tower on the site in 1974.

—Two workers at a reactor in Bradwell, England, were reported in 1974 to have been discovered tossing 20 fuel rods over the perimeter fence.

—Unidentified groups thought to be separatists exploded bombs in 1975 at French nuclear plants at Fessenheim and at Mt. D'Arree.

—In 1976, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission sent formal warnings to 58 nuclear plants that it had received word of threatened attacks by two terrorist groups. Precautions were redoubled. Nothing happened.

Through the 1960s and 1970s, various U.S. corporations, including Kerr-McGee and the Nuclear Materials and Equipment Corporation — Numec — reported losing track of either plutonium or highly enriched uranium over a period of years. Geller says nuclear material often is out of sight temporarily in reactor systems and the missing items cannot be assumed to have been stolen.

There has been no loss of life so far in any of the incidents directed against nuclear facilities. Threats have proved empty.

Yet, spreading nuclear power and all that goes with it has deepened concern and turned attention to four interlocking questions:

1. Will terrorists turn to the nuclear sector?

On Feb. 28, West Germany fired one of its leading nuclear physicists, Klaus Traube, fearing he might pass secrets to terrorists with whom he allegedly maintained "intensive contacts."

Existence of some sort of "Terrorist International," with radical aims, is known to Western governments. A rough device, one-hundredth the strength of the obsolete Hiroshima bomb of 15 kilotons — 15,000 tons of TNT — could kill up to 5,000 people in a city setting, mostly by radiation. And terrorists need not use bombs for their deadly work. Eight ounces of plutonium powder fed into an air conditioner would menace the lives of everyone in a 20-story building by spreading lung fibrosis.

2. Will there be another Arab oil embargo? And anyway, are oil supplies running out? The five-fold hike in oil prices already has spurred a global search for new sources of energy with nuclear power high on the list of priorities for nations able to pay.

3. Who, the big powers are asking, will be next among the developing nations to detonate an atomic device — and what will its neighbors do?

The coded message telephoned to Indira Gandhi on May 18, 1974, said crisply: "The Buddha is smiling." It meant a nuclear device had just been fired successfully underground in the Rajastan desert. The political fallout from the first-ever test by a developing country exceeded its explosive yield. There were strong demands then for tightened safeguards against what was taken to be India's misuse of equipment and material supplied by the United States and Canada. India insisted no weapon had been fired, only a device intended for "peaceful purposes."

4. West Germany and France in 1975 and 1976 clinched deals to sell Brazil and Pakistan facilities for enriching uranium and producing plutonium. U.S. criticisms of the deals thus far have been resisted and rejected. If the deals are not modified, Carter wants to know, can there be any hope of an organized, worldwide understanding among the powers to head off a free-for-all dash toward nuclear weaponry?

Few authorities today dispute that President Dwight D. Eisenhower, through his 1953 "atoms for peace" plan, opened the gates to a lightly controlled spread of nuclear technology.

U.S. firms collared the market in reactors and nuclear fuels. For 20 years until the early 1970s, they kept up to 90 per cent of the orders. But in recent years the U.S. share has been halved, as European competitors mounted a challenge. In most cases, the U.S. government subsidized the sale of reactor systems to help U.S. corporations, paying half the price for the reactors and lending the rest of the money at low rates of interest.

A Library of Congress handbook shows U.S. firms capturing more of the 287 reactor sales — reactors either working, building or planned — than all foreign competitors combined. The Energy Research and Development Administration estimated U.S. export earnings from reactor and related services run to $2.3 billion yearly and by the year 2000 will add up to about $100 billion.

Dr. Fred C. Ickle, former director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, has acknowledged that the United States oversold the "atoms for peace" plan. Not enough safeguards were written into sales contracts.

Some 40 countries around the world using nuclear reactors are filling up their stopgap depositories for waste fuel to the bursting point for want of safe and sure locations to store the radioactive materials, which will stay toxic for at least 24,000 years. All the sites and systems they are using could be targets of terrorist attack that could, if carried out, imperil millions.

Five years ago, a physicist named Hannes Alfven wrote on safety in the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists:

"Fission energy is safe only if a number of critical devices work as they should, if a number of people in key positions follow all of their instructions, if there is no sabotage, no hijacking of transports, if no reactor fuel processing plant or waste repository anywhere in the world is situated in a region of riots, or guerrilla activity, and no revolution or war — even a 'conventional one' — takes place in these regions. The enormous quantities of extremely dangerous material must not get into the hands of ignorant people or desperadoes. No acts of God can be permitted."

Fire officials warn motorists in mountains

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Motorists entering the local mountains this weekend can expect to be stopped by Los Angeles County fire officials and warned of the high fire danger.

The U.S. Forest Service has closed all camp and picnic areas in the Angeles National Forest north of the Los Angeles basin until the Red Flag Alert situation is over.

Stan Cleveringa, a fire prevention bureau officer with the county fire department, explained that "Red Flag" comes from a department tradition of hanging a red cloth or flag outside of a fire or ranger station during times of extreme fire danger.

"We consider it red flag weather when the temperature is above 90 and the humidity below 30," explained Cleveringa as he patrolled the road to Mt. Baldy this week.

"The condition may exist for some time and we'll be at all entrances to the mountains checking cars, distributing literature and taking license numbers until the danger abates."

Cleveringa said that all of the motorists he has stopped so far were cooperative.

"Local people are concerned about the tragic fire which hit Santa Barbara this week and also don't want a repeat of the fire which struck these mountains a year ago," continued the fire official.

"But out-of-state drivers are another story.

"One of the first cars I stopped Thursday contained two young women from Florida who were both smoking in an open-top sport car. They had no idea of the danger here."

Cleveringa said he almost issued a citation to a local resident of Mt. Baldy Village who came down the mountain smoking inside of his car.

"The driver thought that because he had his windows rolled up and air conditioner running, he was exempt from the no smoking ban while driving. The ban applies to all drivers — with no exceptions."

Motorcyclists are now confined to paved highways and all drivers are warned that certain trails are closed. Anyone wishing to enter an area should check with a fire patrolman before doing so, added the fire prevention officer.

Two brush fires erupted in the local foothills Wednesday evening and at dawn Thursday. They threatened exclusive homes in Claremont and La Verne but were controlled before they spread from the brush into the residential areas.

"As long as the temperature remains high and the humidity is low, a fire hazard condition will continue," said Cleveringa. "We fire officials are doing all we can to minimize the problem, but it's really up to the public to be careful."

Heat wave is expected to continue

The current heat wave, now in its fifth day, is expected to continue through the weekend, the weatherman says, with temperatures near 100 in the afternoon.

Occasional light breezes may stir up the smog and cut it a little, keeping it light to moderate. But that's the only relief the valley may experience during the day.

The mercury is expected to climb to 98 today and 100 Saturday, at least 10 degrees higher than the normal July afternoon. And the dryness will create extreme fire hazards.

When the sun sinks, however, there will be a respite from the heat, with temperatures dropping to about 70 during the evening and 60 after midnight.

According to the National Weather Service, it will be too hot for a backyard picnic but ideal for the beaches and mountains where you are likely to find most of your neighbors this weekend.

Citizen's forum meets Saturday

The Pomona school district's citizen's forum established by Pomona school trustee Francis Livingston will meet Saturday at 10 a.m. in the board room of the Education Center, 800 S. Garey Ave., Pomona.

The meeting will be aimed at the further identification of school problems and concerns of citizens with the object of problem solving through the group process.

Three in family injured in crash

Three members of one family were injured slightly Thursday afternoon in a two-vehicle accident at Garey Avenue north of La Verne Avenue in Pomona.

The three, driver Jeffery S. Richards, 22, Debbie, 23, and Shawn, 3, all were treated at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

The other driver, Clarence E. Taylor, 43, also of Pomona, was not hurt.

JUNIOR ATHLETES

Clockwise, from left, Dick Mopera, 11, puts on a final burst of speed in the 50-yard dash competition of the Montclair Recreation Department junior pentathlon Thursday afternoon. Raymond Renda, 11, strains to make just one more pullup; Lynette Madden, 14, reaches for the sky in the jump event; and Luis Lopez, 7, braces himself for a landing in the broad jump. Eighty youngsters participated in the event at Vernon Junior High School, coordinated by Bill Gable, assistant recreation director. The contest also included a target accuracy throw.

S.B. supervisors consider how to cut use of county cars

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

Some top San Bernardino County officials consider it a "source of pride" to drive their county cars to and from work, Supervisor James Mayfield charged this week.

Mayfield made his comments while supervisors considered whether to cut the full-time assignments of county cars for certain officials.

For starters, Mayfield suggested that 14 cars be taken away from officials who he indicated had possibly overstepped their bounds in using the vehicles.

"I don't feel department heads should take their cars home," he said. "I'm trying to save money . . . we shouldn't have a caste system of dual citizenship in the county family."

He noted the around-the-clock use of county cars may be part of the "management mystique."

Although the board took no immediate action, supervisors ordered county Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin to submit proposals Aug. 8 on how to save $280,000 in the "motor fleet operation."

Board members recently reduced the 1977-78 budget for purchase of new cars and replacements by 10 per cent, or $280,000. The problem now is finding a way to implement the cuts.

Goodwin submitted a list of 67 county cars assigned to various officials. But Mayfield and Supervisor Dennis Hansberger questioned if all officials assigned the cars were on the list.

Mayfield proposed taking cars from officials who don't really need them — or who drive less than 1,000 miles a month on county business.

The 14 officials he proposed should not have the use of county cars include Goodwin; County Counsel Crane Kitchel; Bernard Boress, head of the Law and Justice Agency; Robert Rigney, head of the Environmental Improvement Agency; Robert Russell, director of Health Care Services; J. Philip Loge, director of the county Medical Center; and George Jeffrey, director of the Human Resources Agency.

Others named were Mayfield's own assistant, Deborah Barmack; Howard Littlefield, director of Supporting Services; Martin Nelson, personnel director; and three deputy coroners.

Board Chairman Robert Townsend disagreed with Mayfield on terminating the use of cars for certain officials.

MOTORIST WARNED

Inspector Stan Cleveringa of the Los Angeles County Fire Department's fire prevention bureau warns Leslie Redford of Claremont of the high fire danger as she prepares to drive up the Mt. Baldy Road. Fire officials are stopping all motorists entering the Angeles National Forest. Motorists are warned of fire hazards and car licenses are recorded.

Alta Loma's Stork airs resignation

Floyd M. Stork, superintendent of the Alta Loma School District for the past 24 years, will step down from his post in June, 1978.

Stork said Thursday that he will submit his resignation to the school board on Sept. 19.

The schools chief said he is not retiring, but has decided that being in his present job for 24 years "is enough."

Stork, who is 55, noted he wanted to stay in education but "at this point I don't know exactly what I will be doing."

By June of 1978, Stork will have served 25 years, and he said, "It's time to do something else."

He will hand in his resignation a year in advance to give the school board "plenty of time" to select his successor.

Stork noted that when he received his present four-year contract which runs out in 1978, "I told the board I wouldn't accept another one. They might have thought I was joking at the time."

Stork started in the district as a teacher in 1950, when there was only one school. He became principal-superintendent in 1953 and full-time superintendent in 1964. There are now four schools in the rapidly growing district.

Board members are aware of Stork's plans, even though he will not submit a formal resignation letter to them until September.

Stork is married and has two grown children. He lives in Upland.

Bailing out troubled SS

The Carter administration's proposals for bailing out our troubled Social Security program are somewhat disappointing. To quote the cliche, they are a band-aid approach when what is needed is major surgery.

Two of the proposals would put the burden on business again. One would eliminate, over a period of four years, the ceiling on wages which are taxable for Social Security purposes. (The current level is $16,500, but if the administration proposal goes through, the employer must pay Social Security taxes on the full amount of his employes' wage by 1981.) The administration also proposes increasing the payroll tax rate levied on self-employed persons from 7 to 7.5 per cent.

Unfortunately, the Carter plan does nothing about the long-standing inequities of the Social Security system. As it now stands, persons who contribute don't necessarily receive benefits; persons who don't contribute may receive benefits. Some are "docked" for working after retirement, while others having a greater income receive the full benefit. It simply doesn't make sense.

Recently, during testimony before the Senate Subcommittee which is discussing Carter's proposals, an original idea was presented — one which would correct many of the inequities described above.

The idea came from the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB), an organization which represents some 515,000 small business firms across the country. NFIB Research Director William J. Dennis, Jr., described it.

The NFIB proposal would divide the current Old Age and Survivors Insurance (OASI) program into two parts. Part A would resemble the existing insurance program, but with some conceptual changes. Under Part A, each individual would receive as a benefit his or her accumulated employe-employer contribution, plus interest.

Since the Part A benefit may not be enough for some individuals or families to exist at reasonable standards, there would be a Part B, patterned after the existing Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. Part B beneficiaries would receive two checks — their Part A entitlement based on employment contributions, and their Part B benefit based on family need. Since Part B benefits would be social subsidies and not earned entitlements, they would be financed from the general revenues, subject to annual appropriations.

This proposal makes sense for several reasons. For one thing, it separates earned entitlements from social subsidies, which makes the system more manageable. For another, since Part B benefits would come from the general revenues, the proposal forces everyone to pay a fair share of subsidies for the low-income elderly. Under the present system, approximately two million federal government employes and three million state and local government employes pay virtually nothing towards these subsidies. The proposal would also eliminate many of the inequities described earlier since all individuals would receive their employer-employe contributions, plus interest, regardless of income, sex, or work status.

The purpose of Congressional committee hearings is to give the public at large the opportunity to discuss administration proposals or to suggest an original approach which may work better. We think NFIB's proposal is this kind of original approach, and we hope Congress pays some attention to it.

Think on these things

Worry is so often mistaken for anger. And it is so easy to take a furrowed brow as a personal affront — something to react to personally. Worry does make angry people, but it's not all for us. We can do someone else — and ourselves — a big favor by allowing a snappy word or a glower go by without rising to it.

Just to understand that there has been some pushing and shoving before we came along, to sense that someone needs time to recenter himself should free us of having to react unpleasantly. Silence has always been a marvelous remedy and so few have ever learned to use it properly. But projecting by our own egos to a little better perception can salve a lot of wounds — including our own.

* * *

Just as the lake can reflect the clouds and sky only when it is calm and smooth, we can reflect our true selves only when we are calm and unruffled. We cannot show our talents, our capabilities, when we are beside ourselves. Not only do we lose our identity with others, but with our own inner person.

Dealing with this human being is sometimes like dealing with a stranger. We hear ourselves say things and do things that are totally unlike what we thought we were. We are out of contact. Control has been given over to someone who reacts violently to everything — taking personally every word someone else speaks, resenting, rebelling against the simplest things. But there is a higher self within us that can regain control — reclaim the true person. It is that which speaks the word to us: I am tranquil — I am peaceful — I am serene.

Supports shopping center

Dear Editor:

We read, with some interest, that the Claremont Planning Commission has decided to overturn the carefully laid plans for a shopping center at Mills Avenue and Base Line Road. We believe this to be an unwise decision. We urge the Claremont City Council to restore the previous plan, and proceed to develop this most pressing urban need.

It is difficult to know to what extent the desires of prospective users of the proposed shopping center, or the residents within, say, a mile of the location, played in the commission's decision. With all due respect to Commissioner Arkin's "feelings," he has not accurately summarized our desires and needs.

A variety of canvassing techniques for adequately gauging citizen responses are well known, and widely used in urban planning. The "sheaf of letters" criterion is, of course, notoriously unreliable as a summary measure of total response. For a municipal planner to rely heavily on spontaneously (?) generated letters or on one's visceral "feelings," is curiously inept. We think the City Council can do better than that. It certainly has the authority, and we think the responsibility to do the job right. If community reaction is to be an important part of this decision-making process, then a thorough and reliable survey is clearly called for.

It was suggested that a market at Base Line and Mills would draw shoppers away from established markets in the Village. We do not now find the Village a convenient place to shop. For the most part, we shop in Upland or in Montclair, because of their easier access (along Base Line, which we must travel!). We often see a number of our neighbors there, as well. A nearby shopping center would, in fact, tend to bring our shopping back to Claremont. So our limited observations and conjectures suggest a net commercial gain, not a loss, to Claremont. Once again, however, it is not conjectures or piecemeal observations that provide the best evidence, but a systematic canvass.

We do have one important reservation. The intersection in question is heavily traveled. A large number of school-age children cross the intersection daily to attend school. We think an adequate plan must include unusually thorough safety measures for pedestrian traffic. We are confident that this requirement can be met.

With the modest, but important, condition cited above, we strongly favor a shopping center at Mills and Base Line. This would meet what we perceive to be our community needs far more effectively than would a commercial-professional zone. We urge the city council to restore the shopping center to the General Plan.

Navy to get 12 more A-7Es

- WASHINGTON — The Navy will get a dozen more A-7E attack planes than it requested — not because of any urgent military need but because the planes will be constructed in Texas. They will cost the taxpayers, by the way, a whopping $100 million which President Carter doesn't want to spend.

Texas happens to be blessed, thanks to a seniority system that advances congressmen who keep getting re-elected, with a powerful congressional delegation. The congressmen from Texas have the power, as they have just demonstrated, to overrule the president when he tries to cut down on federal spending in the Lone Star State.

Carter is trying in the White House to make ends meet. He sent his budget trimmers to confer with the Navy about possible cutbacks. They agreed that the Navy could get along without those carrier-based, computerized A-7Es. So the president excised them from the budget, leaving only $21 million to keep the A-7E program going.

The Texas legislators are, of course, for God, country and economy, but they favor the economies in someone else's state. The test is not whether the weapon is worth the cost but whether its production will benefit their Texas constituency.

The A-7E warplanes are supposed to be built by LTV Corporation in Fort Worth, Texas. The Carter cut, therefore, aroused Rep. Dale Milford, D.-Texas, who has a lot of constituents in Ft. Worth. He enlisted House Democratic leader Jim Wright, whose home district also reaches into Ft. Worth. Then Rep. George Mahon, D.-Texas, the powerful House Appropriations chairman, joined the A-7E crusade.

This awesome trio, with help from other Texas congressmen, quickly restored funds for six planes over White House opposition. On the Senate side, Sen. John Tower, R.-Texas, a power on the Armed Services Committee, persuaded his colleagues to purchase six more planes, making an even dozen.

The Texans carried out their caper so skillfully, in fact, that there is little chance of a presidential veto. To knock the extra $100 million out of the budget, Carter would probably have to kill the entire appropriations bill for the Pentagon.

ESCAPE FROM BANGKOK: Our May 9, 1977, column apparently has driven Thailand's top narcotics trafficker into the hills. We identified him from secret intelligence reports as Chang Kai-cheng, a man of many tentacles, who operates hotels, trucks and shops.

But his biggest business, according to an intelligence document, is running "the largest heroin distribution organization in Thailand," with "narcotics connections in Holland, Singapore, Malaysia and Hong Kong." Much of the heroin he smuggles, of course, winds up in the back alleys of America.

We obtained his secret telephone numbers and placed a trans-Pacific telephone call to the startled Chang Kai-cheng in his Bangkok hideaway. Speaking through an interpreter, we got Chang to confirm facts we had learned about his background. But he stopped cold when we brought up the subject of narcotics. He claimed not to know what we were talking about.

Now information has reached House Narcotics Chairman Lester Wolff, D.-N.Y., that Thai authorities were spurred into action by our column and that the imperiled Chang fled Bangkok. According to Wolff, the Thai police discovered 348 pounds of heroin, morphine and opium in Chang's palatial dwelling.

ANTICONSUMER CRUSADE — The nation's biggest corporations are again deploying their heavy artillery to shoot down consumer interests.

Having wounded the proposed Consumer Protection Agency, the corporate troops are turning their fire on the Federal Trade Commission, where Chairman Michael Pertschuk has assembled a roster of young, tough enforcers.

Leading the charge are congressional lobbyists for the National Association of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce, J.C. Penney, Montgomery Ward and Sears. The high-powered Business Roundtable, meanwhile, has hired former Nixon White House lobbyist Tom Korologis to fight the commission.

They are trying to destroy a bill that would enpower the commission to compel corporations to relinquish evidence about shoddy goods or fraudulent advertising. It would also make it easier for consumers to recover damages by suing businesses for FTC violations.

Baby sales big business

The way to buy a baby is to pay off an adoption lawyer — in cash.

So there is no way to know how many babies are thus sold each year.

But some court records have been ordered opened in New York. By projecting what we read there, we see the black market in babies involves many thousands each year.

It is a paradox that while society and government have been preoccupied with "unwanted babies" . . . promoting birth control and abortions . . . babies are so "wanted" by many childless couples that an adoptable caucasian infant will bring as much as $20,0000 on the clandestine market.

In most states it is legal for adoptive parents to pay the natural mother's medical expenses and also any fees to adoptive agencies or attorneys. It is not legal to pay for the infants themselves.

So that is done "under the table."

The Manhattan district attorney is investigating baby brokers in New York City. Last month the Appellate Court ordered heretofore secret adoption files opened for the prosecutor.

Nationwide, this has thrown a scare into the baby brokers. Their secrets are no longer secret.

Most of the cash involved in baby sales does not go to the natural mother; it goes to the lawyers.

One such lawyer, specializing in private adoptions, maintained pregnant women in midtown Manhattan apartments — took their babies from them on the sidewalk outside Mt. Sinai Hospital after they were born.

It was even more a "breeding business" for a California lawyer.

His tapped telephone revealed a call from a woman who said, "I am fertile on the 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th of this month. Get me someone. I want to do it this month."

The prosecutor in that case says the attorney then sought a sexual partner for the woman caller with the understanding of a cash offer for her baby — cash on delivery.

That lawyer was prosecuted, is free pending appeal. If he ever does go to jail he will be the first ever thus punished in the entire history of baby selling.

Reporter Pam Zekman of the Chicago Sun-Times recently posed as an unwed mother, had encounters with several baby brokers, confirms the ritual.

Prosecutors in most states say that it is very difficult to prove that a baby is illegally placed. The transaction is always structured to make it appear a legitimate private placement.

And there never has been any legal definition of what constitutes a "reasonable lawyer's fee."

The New York Times reports of a white New Orleans mother who did not reveal that the father of her baby-to-be was black. ●

The adoptive parents brought it back, demanded their money back.

Humphrey-Hawkins woes

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Remember the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, that ultimate Democratic Party solution to the economic woes of the nation? Sure you do. Who could forget a program so bold in conception and sweeping in reach?

Jimmy Carter could, that's who. Or to be more accurate, he would like to forget it — once and for all. But there are those on Capitol Hill and elsewhere who keep reminding him of his campaign endorsement of the most comprehensive economic planning measure since the New Deal.

The Humphrey-Hawkins bill is impossible to summarize in a single sentence or two. It is a complex and all-encompassing prescription for government guidance of the economy which is designed to achieve and maintain full employment, even if that means making the government itself the employer of last resort.

Every Democratic candidate for president in 1976 endorsed the controversial measure, although Carter did so only belatedly after the bill had been substantially modified to place greater emphasis on the importance of the private sector.

The goals and concepts of the legislation were written into the very first plank of the Democratic Party platform by the national convention. And Carter's own compilation of campaign pledges, the "Promises, Promises" document released by the White House early this year, list support of the bill as a key element of his economic package.

Yet in the first six months of his administration, the president has done his level best to ignore the Humphrey-Hawkins bill.

Only repeated inquiries from the congressional Black Caucus and from House Democratic leaders persuaded Carter to open negotiations on the subject.

In mid-July, key White House officials — economics adviser Charles Schultze, domestic adviser Stuart Eizenstat and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall — met with Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., a staff aide to Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., and economist Leon Kyserling, who wrote much of the bill.

The meeting did not provide much encouragement to advocates of the legislation. "They prefer not to have a bill," Hawkins acknowledged in an interview. "They think they're doing pretty well on their own and that we ought to rely on their efforts."

"We're glad they are finally talking with us, but obviously we feel strongly that the legislation is still needed," he said.

Advocates of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill feel none of Carter's economic measures can make a dent in the disastrous levels of unemployment among blacks and, to a lesser degree, women.

While the overall unemployment rate has been dropping gradually, joblessness among blacks has actually increased during the past year — and Labor Department figures indicate a continuation of the pattern for the future.

Blacks and their allies in organized labor, the churches and liberal groups like Americans for Democratic Action are furious at Carter's resistance to the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, which they see as the only effective means of attacking hard-core unemployment.

A coalition of 32 national organizations now plans to hold a "mobilization" in Washington this September to put pressure on the president to support the legislation.

In the meantime, Hawkins and other congressmen involved in the struggle concede there is no hope of pushing the bill through Congress without administration backing. "It's resting quietly," said a staff aide on the Senate Human Resources Committee.

Labor Secretary Marshall is the only member of the administration who actively supports the Humphrey-Hawkins bill. So far, there is little sign that he can overcome the unified hostility of Schultze, Budget Director Bert Lance and other advisers.

Just in jest

It was Marie Antoinette, of France, who, on being informed that the people had no bread, replied, "Let them eat cake." — But that, of course, was many, many years before America broadcast the famous invitation: "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses. — Send these, the homeless, tempest tossed to me." — Otherwise she would have replied, "Let them go to America." — And once here, our political leaders naturally wouldn't have gone so far as to feed them cake. After all, why go to all that trouble when, as any political leader knows, all it takes to keep most huddled masses happy is a welfare check plus maybe a few pet rocks, hula hoops and some silly putty to keep them occupied.

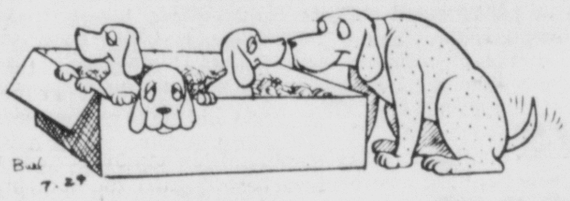
Distemper: pup immune or not?



DEAR DR. MILLER: Isn't it true that newborn puppies are protected from distemper by their mother's milk? — O.M.

DEAR O.M.: Yes, they will receive immune bodies in the milk to temporarily protect them, provided the bitch herself is immune. In some cases, the dam is herself susceptible to distemper and provides no protection to her pups. Even worse, some pregnant females, infected with canine distemper, deliver puppies having congenital distemper. These affected pups may show a gradual decline in strength (the fading puppy syndrome) and die. The distemper-immune dam can provide temporary immunity to her puppies, while the bitch who is not herself protected will bear young who are either not protected, or may actually be born with, and subsequently die from, distemper.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I had been told that hamsters live to be two years old. Eddy is now almost three and still going strong. How much longer can a normal hamster live? — C.J.

DEAR C.J.: Eddy's already ancient, even if he doesn't know it. Just how much longer he can fool Father Time and himself, is hard to say.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It may seem like a strange question, but I have a reason for asking it: Are giraffes passionate? — V.N.

DEAR V.N.: Other animals may lay claim to more passionate performances, though courtship in giraffes does include a prodigious necking technique (an actual intertwining and rubbing of those long necks) which no other animal could duplicate.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I never dreamt it could happen to me. Randy, my retriever, and I went for a dip in a small lake because it was hot. The day, not the lake. The lake actually was pretty warm, though. When we came out of the lake, we both had 'em — yipes! They were leeches! You can bet I tore them off in a hurry. Me first. But it was no fun. If we ever come across any of those ugly things again, is there a better way to get rid of them? — E.B.

DEAR E.B.: Unlatching leeches with a yank may leave mouthparts of the critter in your skin, or at least the skin's likely to be injured in the process. Better to wait until you can encourage the leech to let go by dousing it with vinegar or a strong salt solution. Alcohol's also effective if used for the leech, not the victim.

Astrographs

By Bernice Bede Osol
For Saturday, July 30, 1977
Your Birthday, July 30, 1977

This coming year will be different in that you may form more partnerships than usual. Some will pan out — others may cause you headaches.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Irrespective of who you deal with on a one-to-one basis today, don't feel you have them under your thumb. A bolt from the blue may bring any encounter to push-and-shove. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Extra strength and fortitude may be needed for you to deal with unusual pressures today. Keep your recall — you, too, have limitations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't gamble today on yourself or others, no matter how well you know them. Even if you win, you're going to wind up a loser.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Shun any remarks that could trigger a domestic rumble today. If you get one started, chances are old wounds will be reopened.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Once in a while you tend to express yourself bluntly. If you do so today, there's a good chance you'll have to eat your words.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Others may covet what you have today. If you leave your house or car, lock up well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your self-interests are extremely pronounced today, but those you must deal with match you in this area. You may have to make concessions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll know the signs if someone's trying to take advantage of you today. Don't be wishy-washy or you'll play right into their hands.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You must be extremely careful socially today. If something catches you off-guard, you could handle it poorly and later have regrets.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The most valuable thing you have is your reputation. Keep this in mind today so that your ambitions don't lead you to step on too many toes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There's a chance today you lack the ability to see merit in others' ideas. It's O.K. to push your causes, but don't feel you're the only fish in the sea.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The claws of the lions in the commercial arena are extremely sharp today. Don't go into the fray without your armor.

No TV — an exciting adventure

Dear Ann: Mrs. USA, who descirbed TV as an addiction, asked for a solution. I found mine.

I, too, was using TV as an escape — from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. It was a semi-snooze — from the time I got home from a very demanding job until I rolled into bed.

One night the TV broke. At first I was furious, but something kept me from repairing it. Soon I found I was reading more and eating less. (No TV snacks when I don't watch TV.) I had a lot more energy and began to focus on solutions to problems that had always seemed too overwhelming to face. TV had provided me with an excuse not to deal with them and I simply ambled along from day to day.

My suggestion to Mrs. USA is this: Throw a rock through the screen or push the damned thing down a flight of stairs. Sure, you'll miss it for a couple of days, but it will be the first step toward living in the real world again. — No Name Please (I Have To Live In This Town)

Dear N. Name: If it worked for you, fine, but I am not about to suggest that anyone throw a rock through his TV screen or push it down the stairs.

Making the set inoperable may have been the answer for you, but removing a few tubes would have worked just as well. Then, when something you really wanted to watch was scheduled, you could put the tubes back in and enjoy yourself. There are some programs worth seeing.

Dear Ann Landers: We were talking at our bridge club the other evening about gifts from our married children. I remarked that the best gift I could possibly receive would be for my son(s) to spend one day a year with me.

I love my daughters-in-law, but in the eight to 10 years my two sons have been married I have never been alone with either of them for more than a few minutes.

If any of you daughters-in-law in Ann Landers' reading audience are looking for the perfect gift for your husband's mother — be it her birthday, Christmas or Mother's Day — I suggest this one. It would be the most meaningful thing you could give her. — A Widow Who Knows (P.S. I have spent many afternoons and evenings alone with my daughters-in-law, but never with my sons.)

Dear Mother: I think your suggestion is nifty — and it doesn't cost a dime! Let's hope your letter starts a trend.

Dear Ann: Your answer to the fellow who knew a lot of straight students on campus who were trying bisexuality for kicks was right on target. I'd like to thank you and add, Amen Sister.

One night I got bombed on beer and stoned on pot and went the other way with two other straights who were also bombed and stoned. We wanted to see what it was like. When we sobered up several hours later we were all sick to our stomachs and couldn't look at each other. It never would have happened had we been in our right minds. We all agreed it was stupid, nutty and something we'll be ashamed of for a long time.

Thank you for having the courage to deal with problems of this kind. Your advice is right on and you are performing a much-needed service. — Shalom From Colorado

Dear Shalom: Thanks for your kind words. I received precious few plaudits in response to that letter. Most people who wrote misunderstood my answer completely. They accused me of being condemnatory, vicious and mean to all homosexuals.

Go slow in breaking fast

I am a very susceptible person. I believe what I read, and it affects me in the most gruesome ways. When I read a smog report in the paper, my eyes begin to water. The county health department announcement that flu is "going around" sets me to sneezing.

In a doctor's waiting room I once picked up a magazine on pre-natal diet and exercise, and I had labor pains before I finished reading.

However, every chicken has a backbone, as the new saying goes, and there is one place I draw the line — all this jolly chatter about big, vitamin-packed breakfasts to "start the day off right." Ugh.

Doctors, dieticians, nutrition experts and other busybodies are continually bubbling into print with nauseating articles about the importance of the first meal of the day, sparking their leaden prose with glib allusions to calcium, thiamine and ascorbic acid. Just thinking about such things in the gray morn chills my stomach to a bowl of frozen custard.

In the grim light of day you crawl downstairs, eyes half-closed, mouth feeling like the bottom of a parrot's cage, head thundering like jungle drums. You don't care anything about "starting the day off right." You don't want to start it off at all.

What you want is a couple of aspirin and a bucket of hot, black coffee, followed by that first soul-saving gulp of cigarette smoke. And what do you find? Big glass of cold orange juice (vitamin C). A stack of golden brown pancakes swimming in butter and syrup. You and your gorge rise simultaneously.

Or it might be a rasher of (shudder) bacon, and a couple of fried eggs staring at you bleakly like Patience on a monument. And a couple of fat doughnuts (riboflavin and niacin). Ulp.

Melon, grapefruit, hot cereal, fish — there is nothing these nutrition blokes won't try to stuff down your protesting maw by the dawn's early light. The Borgias could take lessons. Milk — they're crazy for milk, that tasteless liquid from the insides of cows. And they don't even put BRANDY in it!

Toast, well — okay. After a couple cups of coffee I can face a slice of toast. Dry cereal is fairly harmless, too, just so you don't have to assemble the nuclear submarine. You might as well chew on the business end of a broom for all the epicurean kicks you get.

"Eat a big breakfast!" chortles the obest nutritionist. "Get your proteins and calories. Gain sparkle and energy through proper nourishment. Start the day off right!"

My idea of starting the day off right is to get back in bed and sleep for a few more hours.

Hormone production problem

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter, 39, and mother of three children developed Cushing's syndrome. She grew facial hair, developed a moon face, heavy body fat, dry flaky skin. She recently had surgery and the doctors removed both of her adrenal glands. I am told she will have to take cortisone orally.

Will the symptoms of facial hair, moon face and obesity disappear? We were told by her doctors that without surgery she would have lived one year. What causes this problem?

DEAR READER — The picture you have described is caused by an over production of hormones from the adrenal cortex, the outer shell of the adrenal gland that produces cortisone.

Surgery is commonly used in treatment of such patients. If both adrenal glands are removed entirely the patient does have to take cortisone the rest of his or her life. It is replacement therapy since the normal source of cortisone has been removed.

The obesity should reverse itself and the fat pads over the upper face that cause the moon face appearance should disappear, as well as the excess hair growth and other signs of Cushing's syndrome. The outlook depends a lot on what the real cause for the over production of adrenal cortical hormones was.

This is a rare disease but it points up the role that hormones have on obesity. The characteristic obesity of Cushing's syndrome involves the trunk of the body and face while it spares the arms and legs. The legs may be quite skinny while the abdomen may become quite large. The hormones influence the areas involved in the obesity.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have what my doctor calls a "Baker's cyst." It gives me a great deal of pain and I have a problem trying to be comfortable with my leg whether riding, walking, or lying in bed. I have quite a bit of stiffness in my knee after I have ridden in a car for a while.

My doctor has advised that the last thing I should do is to have surgery unless the pain becomes unbearable. He says surgery will leave me with a stiff knee. Since I am only 48 I most certainly would hate to go through the rest of my life that way.

The advice he has given me is to favor my leg as much as possible, and to take a towel and wet it in hot water, wring it out and apply it to my knee. Can you suggest anything else?

DEAR READER — A Baker's cyst is just the normal fluid in the knee joint that has escaped and become encapsulated in a sac-like structure of tissue. They are commmonly painless, unless there is associated disease in the knee joint.

Your story suggests to me that you may have more than just a Baker's cyst and probably have some disease of your knee joint to begin with. In any case I think you should insist on an evaluation by an orthopedic specialist. If it is something he can help you with he will tell you and also what the risks might be.

Opening lead — 3♥

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Some players use the second-best lead from a long suit that doesn't have as good as the jack at the head of it against all contracts.

If West had been playing this convention, his lead of the three of hearts would have insured the slam for South who could have just played the six of hearts from dummy at trick one. It wouldn't matter which high heart West held. If it were the king East would take his jack, but South would have a sure finesse against the king later on and would get to discard one of his clubs.

They weren't playing this convention and South decided to try dummy's queen. East took his king and returned the suit.

South still had a two-way guess for the queen of clubs to make his contract, but fine discarding by East and West led to his losing two more tricks.

South drew trumps, cashed the high diamonds and ran the rest of his trumps. West's last four cards were the nine of hearts and three clubs; East's the seven of hearts and three clubs.

West unguarded the queen of clubs on the last trump while East chucked his heart. So South led a club to the king, finessed against East and lost the last two tricks to the queen of clubs and nine of hearts.

Marmaduke

"I must have unearthed your entire bone collection!"

L.M. Boyd

Fawcett not an unusual name

About those unusual names you see now and then. In a 1950 issue of a national magazine appeared an item wherein the writer incredulously made note of some girl with the improbable name of Fawcett. Doesn't seem so astonishing at the moment, does it? That was the piece in which appeared also the names of girls called Chlorine, Larceny, Dewdrop, Dinette Set, Zippa, Blooma and Mecca.

"He's not so much a person as a Civil War." H.G. Wells said that. Do you know anybody it aptly describes? Likewise.

You're normal, if your back aches. Eighty per cent of the people suffer similarly.

CONVICTS

Q. "Who were Ted Cole and Ross Roe?"

A. The only two convicts who swam away from Alcatraz into the unknown. A lot of other prisoners tried. Some were killed, some were recaptured. But during an extremely dense fog on the afternoon of Dec. 16, 1937, Cole and Roe, both powerful swimmers, took to the water, and if somebody knows what happened to them, that somebody isn't saying. Police boats criss-crossed the mile and a half to the mainland and shore patrols walked the beach. Nothing.

Q. "In which U.S. cities are there the largest number of businesses owned by minorities?"

A. In descending order: 1. Los Angeles, mostly Mexican. 2. New York, mostly black. 3. San Francisco, mostly Chinese and Japanese. 4. Chicago, mostly black by far.

Q. "What do the Mormons mean when they refer to somebody as a 'dabbler'?"

A. A believer who appears to be backsliding from The Word.

YELLOW PAGES

Interesting, some of the goofs that occur in the Yellow Pages. Believe I mentioned that one such directory once put the following filler line under the section headed Funeral Directors: "Miss your loved one? Call long distance." Cab Calloway's dance band franchises turn up occasionally under Taxicabs. And building foundation companies appear from time to time under Corsets and Brassieres.

Women have better depth perception than do men. Or at least, that's what the Carrier Corp. executives evidently believed when they first assigned women to operate thier 20-ton cranes. That superior eyesight, if such it be, is needed by those operators working 30 feet above the ground, they said.

Our word "jury" comes from the Latin meaning "sworn."

Fill a glass of water to the very brim. Then drop in at least 200 pins one by one. Why doesn't the water overflow? Why? Why?

All-woman team prepares cars

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Every day is Ladies Day down on the docks of this bustling Florida seaport, where 139 women jockey thousands of just-off-the-ship new cars and trucks back and forth and around the half-mile-square area that stretches along the St. John River.

Their job at this port of entry is to carry out the installation work order taped to the windshield of every car in the 3,000-car shipments.

Radio, air conditioner and stripe for one, air conditioner and vinyl top for another, carpet saver for the four-door, and so on, for 2,997 more.

All are routinely washed, undercoated and glazed before they are parked in a designated row to be picked up and trucked to Toyota dealers.

The crew's supervisor, Pauline Swaim, says the women are a lot better at the tough, technical and physically demanding job than the college kids used in the work up until seven years ago.

"First thing the guys wanted to do was let 'em rip — see how fast they could go. The result: collisions — one after another," she says. "But the ladies are real nice with the cars. They pamper and coddle them and their work is always neat and precise. You should see the tape striping job they do on the cars."

What is popularly know as the Talleyrand Relay starts between 6:45 and 7 every morning when the women come tooting down Tayllerand Avenue on Jacksonville's north side past the guard at the Southeast Toyota Distributors' gate.

Minutes later they fan out in teams — married, widowed and divorced women; deserted wives, new brides, grandmothers and teen-agers; former telephone operators, factory workers, waitresses, seamstresses, saleswomen and housewives; pigtailed, upswept, bandannaed, denimed, smocked, sneakered and moccasined, they're ready to start.

First into the cars stretched in neat rows as far as the eye can see is the wash team. "Eight of them get 1,500 cars a day through the car wash," their supervisor boasts.

Philippine-born Nancy Berchlett, 4-feet-11, who weighs less than 100 pounds, has been on the wash team for five years, and also does undercoating and glazing. "I love it and make many friends," she says.

She is up at 5 a.m. to fix lunch for her husband and two small children. Before work she drops the kids off at a nursery and collects them on the way home.

As soon as the conveyor belt moves her vehicle out of the wash cycle, Nancy darts in and beeps off to park it in the radio line. There the radio team takes over.

The head of the team, Liz Davis, is a statuesque, red-haired woman with carefully varnished nails and the current Vogue on the top of her tool tray. She left a job as an assistant fashion buyer to join the "ladies." At the age of 7 she was taking apart radios and air conditioners and putting them together again.

"I came by it naturally," she says. "My father's an electrical engineer and I guess I just reverted. Couldn't stand being caged indoors and never seeing daylight."

Because of the mechanical skills required in their work, Liz and the four assistants she trained are the elite — highest paid — of the women.

Shirley Jackson almost didn't make it. her first day on the job she narrowly missed running over the supervisor.

"Never drove a car with a stick shift before," she recalled. "I just froze and couldn't stop. But that Pauline, she didn't fire me. She told me to go home and learn to drive a stick shift car. So I borrowed an old truck and drove it around a field until I got the hang of it."

Joyce Brothers

Overcoming fears

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I just don't understand why my three children all have so many unreasonable fears. There's nothing unusual about our family and yet I wonder if they will be neurotic when they grow up. My husband is a military man and is quite embarrassed by the children's displays of fear. He feels a combination of shame and anger and, as a result, is often very harsh with them. — L.A.

Dear L.A.: A study by the Foundation for Child Development revealed that in our child-oriented society many children are beset by a wide variety of fears: fear of strangers, of something unexpected happening, fear of violent TV programs and fear of their fathers.

Despite their fears, most of the children were found to be content with their families and themselves. Researchers found that among 7- to 11-year-olds, fear and TV go together. Almost a fourth of the children said they feared programs where "people fight and shoot guns." Those who watched four or more hours a week were twice as likely to feel "scared" as those who spent less time with TV.

University of Detroit psychologists found that normal children actually had more fears than disturbed children, although the disturbed youngsters experienced their fears more often.

Your husband's attitude isn't helping your children overcome their fears and it's quite likely that it may be increasing them. Some fear is normal and, indeed, an indication of health. If humans had no fears, we wouldn't exist today. Fears can serve to protect.

Make it clear to your children that fear is normal and that it's important for them to express and talk openly about their feelings. When fears are kept secret, they tend to multiply and intensify. Shared anxieties are less frightening and by talking them out, they're more apt to be overcome.

Heart deaths top list

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Council of Life Insurance says cardiovascular-renal diseases were responsible for half the deaths among persons with ordinary life insurance in the United States in 1975, the last year for which figures are available.

It says cancer accounted for 21.4 per cent of policyholder deaths, pneumonia and influenza for 2.8 per cent of deaths, tuberculosis for 0.1 per cent, diabetes for 1.0 per cent, and other diseases for 16.1 per cent. In all, 91.2 per cent of ordinary policyholder deaths were from natural causes.

MIKE MARYN
In the wrong place at the wrong time

Trouble stalks him

He's been mugged 83 times in the past 5 years

PASSAIC, N.J. (AP) — Mike Maryn is the perfect mugging victim. He's slightly-built, defenseless, walks with a cane and has experience — he's been attacked 83 times.

"He doesn't go looking for trouble. He just happens to be in the wrong place at the wrong time," said Passaic Detective Andrew Risko, who confirmed the 83 muggings over the past five years were "all on the record."

Maryn, 56, has been hospitalized more than 20 times. He's been stabbed, shot at twice and hit over the head with a pipe. His ear was partly cut off, his nose broken, his ribs kicked in, his teeth knocked out and his skull fractured.

Maryn, who stands 5 foot 9 and weighs 150 pounds, estimates he's lost more than $2,000 in cash and several bags of groceries. He has suffered four car thefts, and the last time he lost his job as a night security guard because the car was his only transportation and a blood clot in his leg keeps him from traveling far from home.

Now, Maryn says, he is unemployed, broke, and waiting to qualify for welfare. He lives alone in the dilapidated Dundee section of town.

Passaic police theorize Maryn is attacked so much because "he's accessible."

"He's on the street at late hours, he drinks a bit and he has a cocky attitude," police said.

"If he does get a little boisterous, they hit him and then they figure they should take his money, too," said Risko.

But Maryn has a different theory:

"When I go to work I always dress up — a suit, a shirt, a tie. When they see you dressed up, they think you've got money. If I was walking around in overalls and a rip in my pocket, there'd be no problem."

Maryn said another problem is that he smokes. "A guy asks you for a cigarette. Then he asks you for money. If you don't have money, then he beats you up," he lamented.

Maryn's home is in "a place where a person is not too safe, especially after dark," police said.

But Maryn says he's been mugged in the daytime, too.

He's been the victim of young boys, teen-agers, able-bodied men and several women. One evening he was walking home with a retired policeman when two women hit them from behind and robbed them, Maryn said. The men were both beaten up and the former officer nearly died.

The victim said he never carries a weapon. Passaic police have offered him a police walkie-talkie so he could call for help, but he turned them down. "It would only be taken from me," he explained.

"Sometimes I try to defend myself but when three guys jump on me and they've got a knife, what can I do?" he moaned.

He figures he's bound to be mugged again, but he says: "I don't worry about it. You only live once and you only die once."

Program to aid hardship areas on the mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to aim billions of dollars in federal aid at urban "hardship" areas such as Newark, St. Louis and Philadelphia, are right on target, say Brookings Institution researchers.

The government's economic stimulus programs for the next fiscal year are sending an unprecedented $82 billion in federal grants to states and localities, the researchers told the Joint Economic Committee today.

"Partly by accident and partly by design," they said, the money has been funneled to the areas where unemployment and poverty are most pervasive.

"The average rate of increase" in the amount of federal dollars going to the cities compared to three years ago "is 135 per cent," according to an analysis by the Brookings associates.

"While all major cities receive sizeable increases" in the next federal budget, "cities which are experiencing particularily severe problems will be the primary beneficiaries," they added.

The huge windfall is expected to provide some measure of fiscal relief for cities still reeling from inflation and declining tax bases.

However, many of the programs causing the big increase in spending are due to expire, or have "trigger" mechanisms that will suspend funding if economic conditions improve to a certain level.

"When the Congress turns next year to the question of whether and when to allow the Economic Stimulus Package to turn off, you will face conditions in which a decision could cause a precipitous drop in the funds available to some of the nation's most troubled big city governments," they told the congressional panel.

Brookings studied federal money going to 15 cities and discovered that the worst off on the institution's "hardship" index will receive big increases in federal spending. Newark is to receive a 400 per cent boost; St. Louis 247 per cent, Buffalo 154 per cent and Philadelphia and Chicago 150 per cent and 145 per cent respectively.

Even cities which rated well on the Brookings index will see healthy boosts in federal spending. Los Angeles, for example, is to receive a 162 per cent hike and Phoenix and Houston both will get about 90 per cent more money than three years ago.

"It would be a disaster" to many of these governments if the new federal aid should end overnight, as could happen if the programs are allowed to expire or do not take effect, says economist Richard Nathan.

Cleveland provides a dramatic example of the role federal money can play in a city's finances, said the Brookings researchers—Nathan, Paul Dommel and James Fossett.

Their breakdown of federal grant money reveals Cleveland will receive $110 million from Washington next year — almost as much as the city will raise and spend on its own.

Customs agents open, read mail illegally

WASHINGTON (AP) — Customs agents have illegally opened or read mail and in some cases stolen letters, government officials acknowledged today.

The incidents were described in statements submitted by the Customs Service and Postal Service to a House panel that is looking into mail opening operations by Customs.

The Supreme Court last month upheld the Customs Service's six-year-old practice of opening letters without a search warrant when it suspects they contain illegal drugs or other contraband.

However, laws and government regulations stipulating procedures in mail opening were not followed in the cases cited, the agencies said.

In one of the incidents, customs agents in 1975 asked for and received permission from postal officials to open some domestic letters in Port Isabel, Texas, the two agencies said, although the law only allows customs officials to open mail sent from another country.

In three other incidents, customs agents turned over letters to Navy investigators, who apparently read the letters, the agencies said. The regulations allow only customs personnel to search letters without warrants.

Chief Postal Inspector C. Neil Benson added, "It is our understanding that the warrantless transfers and readings of correspondence which came to our attention were not isolated incidents, but rather reflected a general practice, at least at the New York customs facility, involving the investigative branches of all military services, not just the Navy, over a period of several years."

In another case, a year-long customs investigation in Tennessee, private letters were read by agents. The law allows customs opening of letters to see if they contain banned drugs or other illegal items, but does not allow reading the letters.

In addition, Benson said, the Postal Service has referred "a number of mail theft cases involving customs employes" to the Justice Department for prosecution.

In 1971, citing increases in international narcotics traffic, the Customs Service began the mail openings with the cooperation of the Postal Service. In most cases, the openings are made after a dog trained to sniff illegal drugs has reacted to a letter.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks were routed early Friday after the government reported the economy was slowing down and indications the Federal Reserve Board was tighening credit.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which managed to gain 1.56 points Thursday after plunging 19.75 the day before, was off 8.58 points to 881.41 shortly before noon EDT. The Dow's loss Wednesday was the worst in more than two years.

Traders sold from the outset after the Commerce Department reported that June's leading economic indicators fell 0.6 per cent, following a 0.2 per cent slide in May. Also, the Labor Department reported productivity in the private sector fell 1.8 per cent in the second quarter, after a 6.1 per cent rise in the first.

The news reinforced Wall Street's contention the economy was slowing down following a 7.5 per cent first-quarter rise in the Gross National Product and a 6.4 per cent jump in the second.

Stock selling intensified as short-term interest rates skyrocketed in the wake of the Fed's report late Thursday that the nation's basic money supply surged $5 billion in the latest reporting week.

Arthur F. Burns, the Fed chairman, told the House Banking Committee the board was lowering the lower end of the growth target for the basic money supply. Professional money watchers said the Fed tightened credit Thursday.

As a result, declines led advances, 928 to 266, among the 1,645 issues crossing the stock market's tape.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange at the two-hour mark amounted to about 9,300,000 shares, compared with 11,520,000 traded during the same period Thursday.

Lower earnings reported by U.S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel and Exxon, major firms that figure prominently in the nation's economic growth, also has prompted selling this week.

Bethlehem, which was clobbered earlier this week, the most active NYSE issue, up ¼ to 22⅞. U.S. Steel was off ¼ to 35 and Exxon was down ⅝ to 51.

Archer-Midland-Daniels was the second most active issue, up ⅝ to 18 following a block trade of 100,000 shares at 18. Union Carbide was third, off ⅝ to 47⅛.

New York City bank stocks were lower following published reports that borrowers are using commercial paper instead of bank loans to finance their needs. Manufacturers Hanover was off 1¼, Citicorp ¾ and Chase Manhattan ⅝.

Prices were lower in active trading of American Stock Exchange issues. Houston Oil & Minerals was the most active issue, off ⅜ to 39⅝. International Banknote followed, unchanged at 3½. Acton was third, up ¼ to 7¾.

POUND UP, DOLLAR DOWN — London papers headline the rise of the pound at the expense of the dollar. The pound, which has been one of the weakest currencies in Europe, rose nearly two cents.

Monetary experts expect U.S. to bolster dollar

LONDON (AP) — Monetary experts here expect the U.S. government to move soon to support the dollar in an effort to halt its slide against major world currencies.

British financial commentators who reported that prediction today also said the West German government is pressing for an urgent meeting with American, British and French leaders to discuss the dollar's decline.

In Bonn, West German Finance Minister Hans Apel said he was concerned about the dollar's decline in recent weeks and felt continued fluctuation could threaten global economic recovery.

"The rapidity of the devaluation is extremely alarming," he said in a television interview.

Some British financial writers reported growing European suspicions that the United States is deliberately encouraging the dollar's devaluation to make U.S. exports more competitive in foreign markets in an effort to narrow America's increasing trade gap.

But Apel said he did not believe the United States was trying to gain an unfair trade advantage by allowing the dollar to weaken.

The dollar slumped against the British pound Wednesday in London, sterling gaining nearly two cents in hectic trading and closing at 1.7395 pounds to the dollar, its highest mark against the U.S. currency since last Sept. 16.

The dollar strengthened Wednesday against both the West German mark and the Swiss franc, key currencies, but foreign exchange dealers stressed that the rise did not accurately reflect the trade deficit and the U.S. economy's disappointing performance over the past few months.

In Frankfurt, the dollar closed at 2.2570 marks, up from Tuesday's record closing low of 2.2463. In Zurich, the dollar closed at 2.3862 francs, a slight rise over Tuesday's 2.3825-franc close. The dollar hit an all-low against the franc — 2.3775 to the dollar — in early trading Tuesday.

Washington announced Wednesday a record $2.8 billion trade deficit for June, the 13th consecutive monthly shortfall and more than double the May deficit of $1.2 billion.

Economists blamed the surge on increased imports of costly foreign oil.

This enormous imbalance between dollars being spent abroad for imports and dollars coming into the United States for goods and services is one of the main reasons dealers around the world have been moving out of dollars and into German deutschmarks, other European currencies and the Japanese yen.

"Intervention in support of the dollar cannot be held off much longer," said Patrick Lay, deputy financial editor of London's Daily Express. "At the first sign of official intervention, strength will seep back into the dollar."

Wednesday's dollar gains on the Continent — and the concurrent strengthening of the pound — were attributed to the Bank of England's sudden decision to cut loose the British pound from the dollar. This decision, made with government approval, was announced two hours before Washington reported the June trade figures.

Britain's central banking authority said the pound will now be pegged to a basket of 21 major world currencies, including the dollar, until the dollar itself looks stronger.

That surprise announcement spurred an increase in the value of the pound on foreign exchange markets. The British currency has become one of the weakest in Europe because of Britain's still unresolved economic problems.

The pound gained in Europe as well, indirectly aiding the dollar because of its role as a "vehicle currency." For example, dealers in Germany who wanted to buy pounds first converted their deutschmarks into dollars with which to buy sterling.

Other factors undermining the dollar, according to European monetary experts, are the U.S. inflation rate, currently running at 7 per cent annually, and increases in the American money supply.

Contradictory statements by U.S. government officials on monetary policy also have fueled European uncertainty about the dollar.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal declared earlier this week that Washington would not intervene to aid the dollar. But Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has made it clear he believes the government must protect the integrity of its currency.

Black businessman due government post

NEW YORK (AP) — Big, burly James Bruce Llewellyn's life is a portrait of a man on a dead run toward success. At 50, he heads the nation's largest black-run retail business and is President Carter's choice for a coveted administration job.

"My father always used to tell me I was black and I was going to have to be twice as good to get half as much. He told me I wasn't going to get any breaks. He wasn't far wrong," Llewellyn says.

Carter has asked Llewellyn to head the Overseas Private Investment Corp. It would put Llewellyn in charge of insuring investments of major American corporations in 80 underdeveloped countries.

Llewellyn, whose $40 million food store chain in the New York area was looted and burned during the July 13-14 blackout, is trying to rebuild quickly so he can accept the administration job. Looters and arsonists ravaged 8 of his 16 stores, burned his warehouse and set fire to his office during the blackout.

"The big problem I have is that I've got everything I ever earned invested in this business. It's my present and my future, the summation of my past. It's very difficult to just walk away," he said.

In January, Llewellyn says, he turned down an offer to become secretary of the Army because he was in the midst of a company expansion effort. The job went to Llewellyn's former law partner, Clifford Alexander Jr.

The only son of a middle-class White Plains, N.Y., family, Llewellyn graduated from high school when he was just past 16. World War II boiled in Europe and the Pacific. The Allies had invaded at Anzio.

Llewellyn joined an Army training program at Rutgers University in New Jersey and, at 18, became a commissioned officer in the Army Corps of Engineers.

At 19, he was put in charge of Corps operations in Wurzburg, Germany, a city of 250,000 leveled by British firebombs three days before the Armistice.

"I used to smoke cigars to look older," he said.

He came home in 1948, used his veterans' benefits to open a liquor store in New York City and enrolled as a pre-med major at City College of New York.

He went on to medical school, but didn't finish.

"I got thrown out. My attitude wasn't right. I was older than anybody, and I didn't really have much time to listen to a lot of nonsense," he says.

He switched to law school and finished in two years, working for the Manhattan district attorney's office while still a student.

In rapid succession, Llewellyn worked for five federal and city agencies, the last as the first black to be regional director of the Small Businesss Administration.

Then, in 1969, Llewellyn bought the Fedco food store chain with the aid of a loan from Prudential Life Insurance Co.

"I didn't know the first thing about the grocery business and they loaned me just about three million bucks. They gave it to me on me as a person," he says.

He expanded the business, added more stores and boosted the gross from $16 million a year to $40 million.

Llewellyn has no hobbies. His sole luxury is a fondness for food in which, at 6-foot-5 and 265 pounds, he tries not to indulge.

Llewellyn is president of the Manhattan-based organization, One Hundred Black Men.

"I think that our salvation as a group of people does not reside with the state government or the city government. It resides with ourselves," he f says.

Here's the answer

Q. — An old house we have been looking at has a flat roof. There is a possibility we may make an offer to buy the house. How can we tell whether the roof is in bad shape?

A. — The roofing material should be fairly flat and tight to the roof, with no signs of separations or bubbles. When it doesn't fit this description, it doesn't necessarily mean it is in "bad shape," as you put it. Sometimes it can be patched without too much trouble. Even if the entire roof needs redoing, it may be worth it if the rest of the house is in good condition. Maybe you can get a roofer to give you an analysis and an estimate. Then if a major job is required, you can talk it over with the owner and see whether he will share some of the cost if you decide to buy the house. He might even surprise you and agree to pay for the repair, in which case it should be done before the closing.

Q. — A friend of mine says that finishing the attic is the most common home improvement project. I say it is adding an extra room to the basic house. Who is correct?

A. — Neither. Year after year, kitchen remodeling is listed by the Home Improvement Council as the number one project, both in the amount of jobs undertaken and the amount of money spent.

Q. — The wall in our bedroom has a small crack. The wall is made of gypsum board. In patching the crack, is it necessary to use perforated tape the way you do to cover the seams when the panels are installed?

A. — No. Apply a small amount of patching plaster to the crack, pressing it into place. Smooth with a putty knife and allow to dry. If there is any shrinkage, apply more patching material and smooth again. When dry, sand slightly until the area is level with the adjacent surface.

Q. — My wife left a vase filled with cut flowers on our dining room table for more than a week. When the vase was removed, there was a black spot on the table that appears to go right through the finish to the wood. Is this the same as a white spot left by water and, if so, can it be removed the same way? I got out a white spot from another table about a year ago just by rubbing it with denatured alcohol.

A. — A white spot that was eliminated by rubbing was merely a surface stain. The black spot is usually more serious because it has penetrated the finish and marred the wood itself. You have no choice but to remove the old finish and bleach the black area. This can be done sometimes with a peroxide and sometimes with household ammonia, but not with both together. If neither of these liquids takes out the stain, you will have to use a commercial bleach, applying it to the entire top of the table and following the manufacturer's directions on how to rinse off the residue. You then can go ahead with a refinishing job.

GARDEN SPOT — Flowers and vegetables are tended by patients and visitors at Lutheran General Hospital in suburban Park Ridge, northwest of Chicago. The plots are in raised boxes so wheelchair patients can easily attend the gardens, which were the idea of Merle Cohn, second from right, director of therapeutic recreation.

With better planning, smaller gardens

Vegetable garden possible on a low water allowance

There is good news for many unhappy people who have been forced to decide against planting a vegetable garden this year because of the drought.

Bob Mullen, vegetable crops farm advisor, Cooperative Extention, University of California, says, "You CAN have a vegetable garden even on a low water allowance, if you do some careful planning before you set the plants." His suggested guidelines are:

—Keep garden small. Small gardens need less water and are easier to care for. A garden ranging between 600 and 900 square feet (20 ft. x 30 ft., and 30 ft. x 30 ft.) will be adequate for a family of four.

—Locate garden where ground is level and soil is medium-texture loam. A sloping garden is difficult to water and causes runoff. Sandy, or light soils do not hold much water and require more frequent watering. Loam, which is composed of clay, sand, and some organic matter is best for gardens. It is of good consistency if a short ribbon can be formed with the moist soil when squeezed with the hand. It should split readily and break away when about ½ inch long.

—Avoid or reduce plantings that are grown during the warm season and use a lot of water. These are melons, tomatoes, squash, sweet corn, cucumbers, peppers, eggplant, and sweet potatoes. Plants such as carrots, beets, turnips, radishes, asparagus, potatoes, onions, cabbage, cauliflower, chard, and spinach tend to use less water because they are generally grown at a cooler time of the year.

—Plant only those vegetables that family members like, and only the quantities the family will use.

—Plant shallow-rooted vegetables in one group and deep-rooted ones in a separate group. Shallow-rooted plants need less water, but require more frequent application; deep-rooted ones need more water less frequently (for names of vegetables, see section below on determining when to water.)

Make plant beds narrow. Wet one furrow and leave the other dry. This will draw salt away from the seed row to the dry furrow. If you water every furrow, salt will accumulate in the seed row resulting in severe damage or death to the plant.

—After planting, use a mulch around the base of each plant to reduce water loss from evaporation. This can be straw, compost, or black plastic. Transparent plastic can be used but will permit some weed growth. Black plastic will act as a weed control barrier by shading out and suffocating germinated weeds. Where possible, create a "basin" around individual plants to prevent water runoff.

—Use proper watering methods. Give the whole garden area a good, deep, slow watering at planting to get deep-soil water penetration. From then on, water only enough to keep the upper 12 to 24 inches of soil moist during the growing season. If water is very limited, water every other furrow only. A good idea is to partially imbed in the soil, containers such as coffee cans, filled with water and having several small holes punched in the bottom and sides. These will act as a drip system slowly dripping water to the plant roots.

—Keep garden free of weeds. Remove them while they are young. Weeds can use up to 30 per cent of the water applied to the plants.

—Determine when to water. Carefully, (so as not to injure plant roots) dig up some soil from a 6 to 12 inch depth with a garden spade, trowel, or soil tube. Try to make a ball of it in your hand. If it holds together, watering is not necessary. A rule of thumb is — water lightly every 7 days for shallow-rooted plants (cabbage, lettuce, onions, white potatoes, radishes, sweet corn, turnips, chard), and heavily every 14 days (or more) for moderate to deep-rooted plants (beans, peppers, tomatoes, eggplant, squash, carrots, asparagus and watermelons). In extreme water shortage watering can be withheld until plant leaves start to wilt.

Sandy soils dry out fast and need watering more often — every 4 or 5 days — whereas clay soils hold more water and need watering less often — 14 to 21 days. Water only during the early morning or late evening hours. Watering during the heat of the day will waste much water through evaporation. If you use a sprinkler, place some empty cans under the spray at various spots to determine how much water is being applied. (Less water is applied at the edge of the spray than the area near the sprinkler.) NOTE: Never use a sprinkler during windy conditions because water will be lost through evaporation and distribution of water will be erratic.

Shade plants chosen

For some reason, a shady situation in the garden often leaves the average gardener stumped. In reality, a shaded garden can be one of the most beautiful plantings in the yard. Careful choice of plants is the key to success.

Exotic leaf textures, forms, and leaf colors are added bonuses in the shade garden. To create a cool, green garden first determine exactly how shady your garden spot is. There are different degrees of shade ranging from light, filtered shade under lath or under a tree with an open branch structure to dense shade cast by tall buildings.

Describe your shady situation to your nurseryman and he will be able to help you choose the correct plants. Another important consideration is the condition of the soil. All shade plants appreciate a soil high in humus and nutrients since in many cases they are competing with roots of shade trees. Improving the soil with soil amendments is recommended.

If your shade garden does get a little sunlight, you can grow colorful plants like Impatiens and Tuberous or Fibrous Begonias with their lavish floral displays. Lobelia add a nice blue to the garden and the Flowering Tobacco which is fragrant will do quite nicely. These will all brighten semi-shady spots in the summer. There are also many hardy perennials that flower as nicely. Lovely Campanula spreads quickly and provides lavender bell flowers in the spring along with the delicate Bleeding Heart, striking Primroses and colorful orange Clivias. Few can beat tough Daylilies for dependabiltiy and beauty. They send out lilylike flowers all summer with little care or attention. If they have at least half a day of sunshine.

The decorative aspects of paint have been recognized for centuries, but there was a time when paint was used on a house primarily as a protective covering, a period during which most houses were white.

When it became fashionable to use coloring pigments in paint, they had to be added by hand and mixed well with the other ingredients. How different from today, when there is such a multiplicity of available colors and such a proliferation of artificial names for them that making the proper selection can be somewhat confusing.

It is well to remember, when choosing a color, that paint applied to a large surface, such as a wall, will appear darker than it did on the color card in the paint store. Also, look at the color card both in daylight and under artificial lighting, so that if there is a variation in shade, you will know whether it will suit your purpose.

Besides its use as a decorative and protective coat, paint can have a third function. Depending on its color, it can make houses and rooms seem larger or smaller, higher or lower.

Light colors in a small room will make it it appear larger; conversely, dark colors make a large room seem smaller.

Ceilings appear lower when darker than the walls, and higher when lighter than the walls.

When the outside of a house has unattractive features, paint them the same color as the rest of the house. If you want to call attention to an especially interesting part of the house, paint it a different color. A common mistake in many houses is a front-facing garage door painted a much brighter color than the rest of the structure, the result being that the eye catches the door before it sets on the house — which may be all right if you don't want people taking too close a look at your house.

White and light colors reflect the sun's rays best and thus keep a house cooler in hot weather. Not so incidentally, white remains the most popular color both inside and outside the house. And don't think white is white is white. Some are white white and some are off-white, the later classification including many subtle shades. Be sure you choose the white you want. This is especially important if you have painted something white and run out of paint; tell the dealer you want a new can of the same brand of white with the same code number, if there is one. Play safe and take back an empty can.

Paint, applied in the right places and in the right colors, can serve as a danger signal and make hazardous areas more visible. Stripes are the best way to mark the top and bottom of dangerous basement stairs, using combinations of orange and black, yellow and black or black and white. If you feel that such a combination might detract from the appearance of a finished basement, at least paint the bottom step in a contrasting color that fits in with the general decorative scheme and still highlights the danger.

There are dozens of other places — unlighted driveways, gates, low basement pipes, dark corners, etc. — where paint can be used to call attention to possible hazards and so prevent accidents.

Guidelines are offered in household water savings

Using soapy wash water from dishes or laundry will help keep plants alive in an emergency, but you should be aware of certain possible problems.

The University of California now has a free leaflet available which spells out the pros and cons of using household waste water.

Some general guidelines as given in the Cooperative Extension publication include:

—Use "graywater" on plants but don't let it touch the edible parts.

—Don't use on household plants. (Cold water from the shower before it warms up could be used on these.)

—Use "graywater" only as a temporary measure during a water shortage crisis.

Gardeners check list

—It's a good idea to shelter bonsai plants during the hot weather of August and September. Keep foliage dust-free and moist with a spray of water applied each morning. If plants are in shallow containers, it may be necessary to water plants often but use good judgement to prevent over-saturation. Green scum on the surface of the soil is an indicator of excess moisture.

—Give hibiscus adequate water during this month — their most luxuriant and active growing period. Ease up on the heavy watering by the middle of October or at the onset of cooler fall weather. Other sub-topicals might be benefited by late summer fertilizing plus good watering.

—Studies have shown that blocking the hot rays of the sun from the exterior is much more effective than drawing the curtains indoors to reduce interior air temperatures. Planting trees that shade your home in summer is one way to reduce energy costs. "Planting shade trees," says the California Association of Nurserymen, "is like planting an air conditioner."

—Mulch or re-mulch all your plantings to conserve valuable moisture in the soil and to help keep roots cooler in the hot days ahead.

Record Reviews

SMOKEY ROBINSON: "Big Time" (Tamla T6-355S1).

It has become almost a rite of passage for black singer-composers to try their hand at soundtrack writing; Curtis Mayfield and Marvin Gaye have had some of their biggest hits with such projects. Smokey Robinson, who is by now something like the senior member of the black composer-performer genre, has not come up with anything as totally engrossing as Mayfield's "Super Fly," but "Big Time" definitely has its moments. They come mostly when Robinson sings — "Theme from Big Time" and Side Two's opener, "So Nice to Be With You," are in the classic mold he developed with the Miracles. Some of the instrumental passages are fit only for elevators and shopping malls, though, which drags the record down. Still, on the four songs he sings, Robinson sounds as good as he has at any point since leaving the Miracles.

* * *

"The Roots of Rock 'n' Roll" (Savoy SJL 2221).

Arista's ambitious repackaging of the Savoy catalog has finally resulted in an excellent pop package, which traces the black sources of pre-rock & roll R&B (circa 1945-1955). Saxophones rather than guitars dominate, which is fine, and the vocals are less wild but as spirited as any of the music which followed. Stylistically, the range is broad, including West Coast R&B by Johnny Otis, the New Orleans piano blues of Huey "Piano" Smith, doo-wop vocals from groups like the Ravens and post-bop instrumentals like Paul Williams' "The Hucklebuck." Perhaps the highlight is the two-disc collection's opening number, "We're Gonna Rock, We're Gonna Roll," which proves, for once and for all, that the saxophone, not the guitar, is the ideal rock & roll instrument.

RODERICK FALCONER: "Victory in Rock City" (United Artist UA-LA777-G).

Falconer's great strength is his music, which is surprising since he used to be Rod Taylor, a West Coast poet of some repute. The music is a David Bowie-like pastiche, and perhaps has as much to do with co-producer Peter Ivers as with Falconer. Unfortunately, there is a kind of drippy condescension to the lyrics; "Rock City" is the kind of salute to the music that takes all the juice out of one's memories, and, as for the rest, as a social commentator this guy ain't Randy Newman. It is also possible to find Falconer's flirtation with neo-Fascist imagery more than faintly disgusting.

THE STRANGLERS: "IV (Rattus Norvegicus)" (A&M SP-4648).

This is punk rock of the most purely outrageous variety. Vocalist Hugh Cornwell sings in a razor blade growl, and the band plays the usual (for punk rock) minimally competent Animals-Doors hodgepodge, a little less funky than the former antecedent, a little less flowery than the latter. The lyrics, however, are the real hoot: women are worse than vixens, they are actually killers, ranking third to rats and men in their unbecoming viciousness. Must be heard to be believed; the group that will make the Ramones seem genteel.

* * *

CANDI STATTON: "Music Speaks Louder Than Words" (Warner Bros. BS 3040).

Statton and producer Bob Monaco seem to have run out of material after last year's wonderful "Young Hearts Run Free." Here, she covers a number of pop and disco hits. Some of them work ("Nights on Broadway"), some of them don't ("Listen to the Music"), most of the rest, including all the originals, are simply forgettable.

PICK A LENNON

Lennon Sisters have new image

Progress Bulletin Weekend! Entertainment

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The Lennon Sisters, the wholesome darlings of the Lawrence Welk Show, want everyone to know they're not boring, sugary-sweet choir girls any more.

Now all in their 30s and the mothers of a total of 14 children, they are bursting the nostalgic champagne bubble of their childhood image with a sophisticated song-and-dance routine complete with a mock strip on stage.

"What bothers us is when people categorize us as being perfect, as having no dimension, as being sugary-sweet," says Janet, the youngest at 30.

"I think people feel now that we are individuals, that there is depth to us, that we're not just four little sugar pies that are dropped on stage and sing cute songs," says Kathy. "I think they realize we've grown up and we've gone through a lot of headaches and problems."

The Lennon Sisters' Las Vegas act, with Andy Williams, is rather different than their show business debut on Welk's 1955 Christmas television show. A clip of that is part of the act. Welk introduces Dianne, 16, Peggy, 14, Kathy, 12, and Janet, 9, and the four pony-tailed cherubs wearing big-bow blouses sing the religious song, "He."

The screen lifts and the four women sashay out, dressed in men's gangsters suits. Singing "Good Time Ladies Rag" they doff the suits to reveal red corsets with black lace.

Their other costumes for song-dance numbers by themselves and with Williams include gold lame gowns slit to the thigh and white spangled halter tops with slinky white pants.

"I think people are surprised to see us being anything because of the image that people get when they hear our names," said Janet after one show. "They don't expect us really to do anything except stand and sing."

Most of the response has been favorable, said Kathy, except for one elderly lady who asked Janet, "Honey, does your mommy know you're doing this?"

"I don't think we have changed our concept of ourselves," said Peggy. "I think people who liked us when we were children will like the idea that we are now women instead of children.

"And we can't do children's songs anymore. And we can't stand in little chiffon dresses and I think they appreciate that fact rather than be shocked by it."

Andre Tayir, who organizes Williams' shows, came up with the concept for their act when they first played Las Vegas six years ago.

"We wanted to make clothes changes on stage," recalled Dianna, "and he said, 'Why don't you strip?' He said 'You could do a mock strip and nobody would expect it and it would be unique.'"

The sisters now play Las Vegas, usually with Williams, about three times a year. Born and raised in Venice, Calif., they all live in the Los Angeles area with their families and don't do much other performing.

"We traveled so much when we were children," said Peggy, "Now we really pick and choose. We could probably work every day of our lives, but we really choose not to."

Dianne's husband, Dick Gass, is a telephone safety representative and they have three children. Peggy is married to musician Dick Cathcart and they have six children. Janet and her husband, John Bahler, a musician who does arrangements for the sisters, have five children. Kathy, the only sister without children, is married to studio musician Mahlon Clark.

The four have just finished writing a collaborative autobiography, which they think also will surprise people. Titleless so far, it is told mainly through Kathy's voice, with the others having chapters to describe dating and marriage. They hope to have it published by Christmas.

They are also negotiating with a Christian record company to do an album of spiritual songs.

"We're all Christians," said Kathy. "We were raised strict Catholics."

"God is first in our lives," adds Peggy. "Our children go to Catholic schools. Religion is a very important part of our lives. Not a holy, holy type of thing. It's just there."

'Holocaust' slated for TV as mini-series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC said the cast for its eight-hour mini series "Holocaust" will include Joseph Bottoms, Tovah Feldshuh, Rosemary Harris, Michael Moriarty, George Rose, Meryl Streep, Fritz Weaver and James Woods.

"Holocaust" is an original dramatization by novelist Gerald Green and tells of the murder of six million Jews by the Nazis. It will be presented in four parts and will cover the decade between 1935 and 1945.

It will introduce Blanche Baker, daughter of actress Carroll Baker, in her televsion debut. It will be filmed on location in Europe.

Robert De Niro now working in 'Deer Hunter'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Deer Hunter" has gone into production in Mingo Junction, Ohio, with Robert De Niro in the lead role.

Academy Award winner De Niro portrays a blue collar worker of Russian descent in a U.S. steel mill, where an incredible wartime experience makes returning home an agonizing encounter.

NBC/TV plans show on Capra

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The film accomplishments of Frank Capra will be the subject of an NBC-TV "Big Event" to be produced by Columbia Pictures Television.

The program will highlight scenes from the Capra movies, including "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Lost Horizon," "Mr. Leeds Goes to Town" and "You Can't Take it with You."

Network plans to pay people to watch its television shows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The old saying, "You couldn't pay me to watch that show," may get the acid test next fall. CBS, to help publicize its new series, will run a $250,000 sweepstakes for viewers then.

"It's designed to get 'em to at least sample the shows," says Louis Dorfsman, the veteran CBS advertising chief who hatched the campaign. "If they get hooked, that's marvelous."

The campaign, costing CBS more than a million, kicks off at the start of the 1977-78 campaign with an 11-page advertisement in the Sept. 17 edition of TV Guide magazine.

In addition to touting the 10 new series on CBS' fall schedule, the ad includes a card viewers are asked to fill out and mail to CBS to be eligible to win cash, goods or both.

The last day for card-mailing is Oct. 21. The winners — no individual can win more than $25,000 — will be announced on Nov. 21.

"What we're doing is asking the reader to watch at least five of the new shows and answer some simple questions we pose about them," said Dorfsman. He was asked for a sample.

"Oh, tough ones," he said in jest. "Like who plays the lead on 'The Betty White Show'?" Other questions will ask viewers what they like about various stars and various new shows, he added.

Must viewers actually observe the offerings to be eligible?

"That's an iffy question," Dorfsman said. "But there's no arm-twisting. What we say is, 'We would like you to watch.' However, they theoretically can send the cards in without watching the shows."

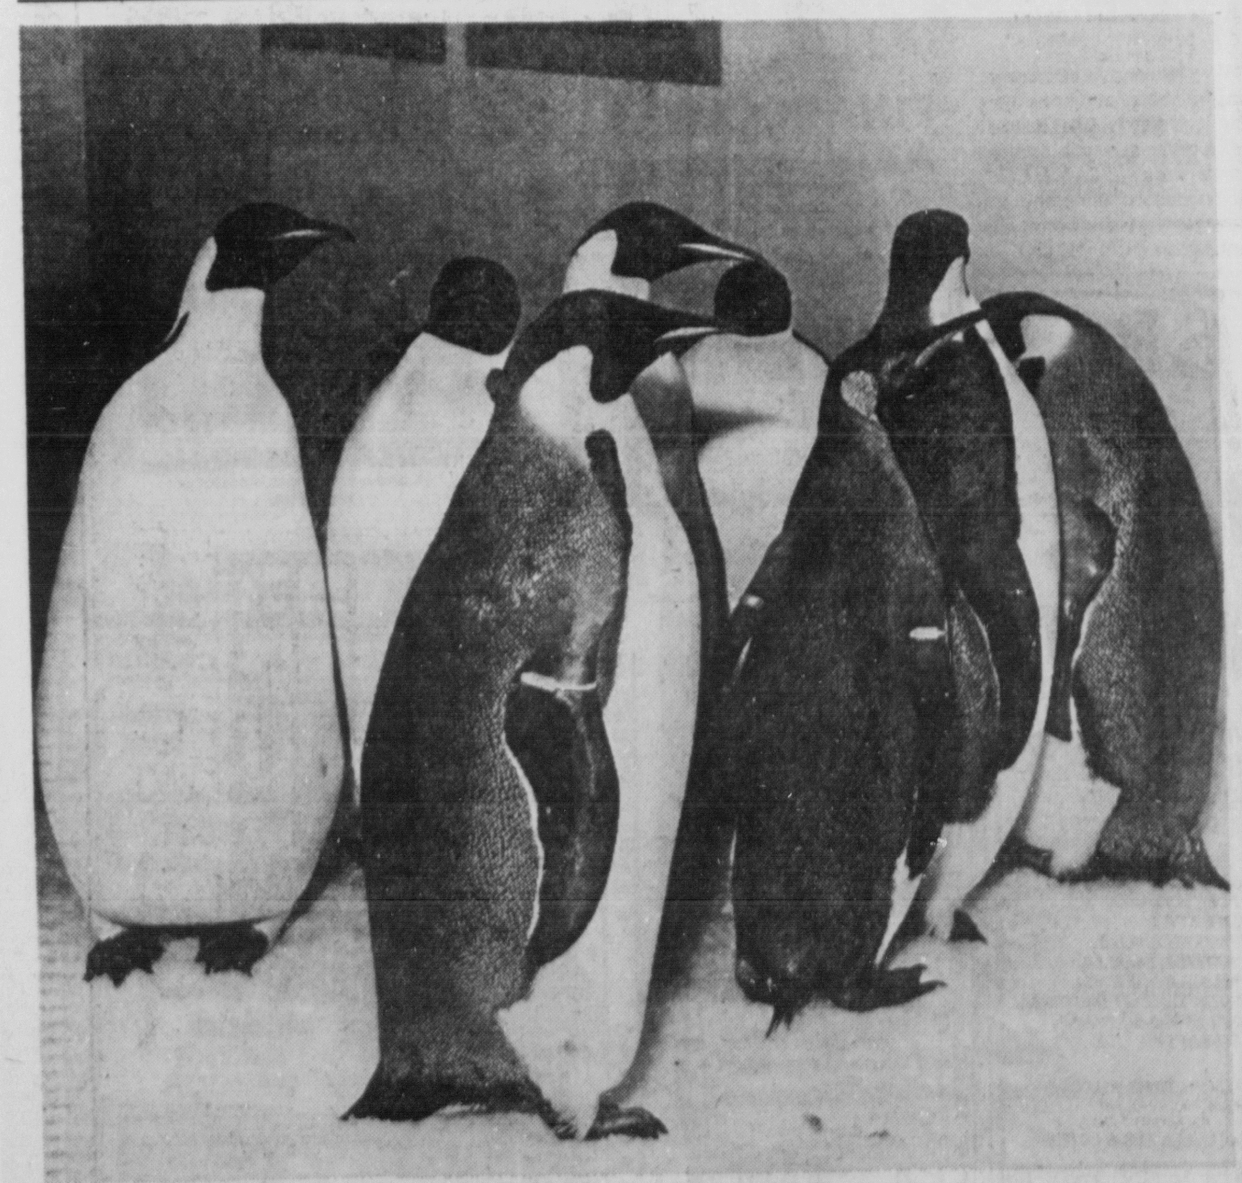
When Dorfsman first unveiled his sweepstakes campaign to CBS affiliates last June, he noted that campaigns similar to it had been run the last 18 months by a number of package goods advertisers.

In those efforts, viewers were asked to watch specific commercials on specific shows, he said, and it resulted in a 17 per cent average rise in ratings for all the programs in which the ads appeared.

And, in a phone chat from New York, he made no bones about CBS' campaign seeking to raise ratings as well as publicize new shows.

If the advertisers' works caused a 17 per cent ratings hike, he said, "I don't know why I couldn't figure on a 25 per cent increase. I think people would rather watch shows than commercials."

Dorfsman, who expects three million to five million viewers to answer CBS' question cards, said it's the first time he can recall that any television network ever tried a campaign such as his.



KEEPING THEIR COOL

Emperor penguins at Sea World in San Diego are not bothered by the current heat wave. They are kept in a specially designed room where the temperature remains between 20 and 30 degrees Fahrenheit. Three large ice machines provide 6,000 pounds of finely flaked ice daily.

ON THE BEAT

Bob Crosby and his orchestra, featuring the Bobcats, will perform swing music at Disneyland's Plaza Gardens from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. nightly Sunday through Aug. 6.

Symphonette on Starlite series

The Montclair Starlite Symphonette, conducted by Clyde Owens, will present a concert in the Montclair High School auditorium at 8 p.m. Tuesday. Admission is free.

This is the final event of the summer Starlite Patio Theater series sponsored by the Montclair recreation department.

Featured soloist will be 15-year-old violinist Elizabeth Thomas of Ontario, who will play the third movement of Concerto No. 2 by Seitz. She was an award winner in the recent John Child Walker Youth Talent Award Competition.

The program will also include the Allegro in C from Sonata No. 12 by Mozart; the First Suite from "Carmen" by Bizet; Two Shakespearean Sketches from R. Vaughn Williams' "The England of Elizabeth"; the first movement from Vivaldi's Violin Concerto No. 6; Beethoven's Turkish March from "The Ruins of Athens"; Nocturne from "Midsummer Night's Dream" by Mendelssohn; "March Militaire Francaise" by Saint-Saens; Enesco's Romanian Rhapsody No. 1; Three Songs of Chopin, transcribed by Norman Dell Joio; Moussorgsky's Hopak from "The Fair at Sorochinsk"; "The Waltzing Cat" by Leroy Anderson; "Le Tambourine Swings" by Rameau, and the Russian Sailors Dance from "The Red Poppy."

Harve Edwards will be program commentator.

Rooney to star in 'Stallion'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — United Artists has begun production of "The Black Stallion," based on the 1941 novel by Walter Farley.

Mickey Rooney and young Kelly Reno star in the film, along with four Arabian horses, who will combine their talents to play the title role. Making his debut as a director is former UCLA film student Carroll Ballard, whose short films have been nominated for Oscars.

An actor at his peak

Finney tries new talents

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — I always knew that Albert Finney wasn't the old man he played in "Scrooge" or the middle-aged man he played in "Murder On the Orient Express." I always knew that he was a young man playing parts considerably older than himself.

But I really wasn't prepared for the real, out-of-makeup Albert Finney. He's not merely young, he's exuberant, vibrant, restless. He smiles a lot, laughs a lot, paces the floor and gestures broadly.

And, like the young man he is, he is constantly searching for new avenues of expression. Right now, for example, he is out with an album of songs, songs he wrote himself. The man who played "Luther" is hardly the sort you'd expect to find coming out with an album, but there it is.

ALBERT FINNEY

The strange thing about it, Finney says, is that he never had the slightest intention of being a singer.

He had done some singing on stage. There was a musical some years ago in London called "The Lily White Boys." And, of course, he sings in "Scrooge" — his entrancing "Thank You Very Much" has practically become the national anthem for kids every Christmas time.

The genesis of the album, called incidentally, "Albert Finney's Album," actually traces back to "The Lilly White Boys." That was about 15 years ago, and, while it was running, Finney was approached by a man who asked him if he'd like to record.

"What? Me? Make a record?" Finney says he answered. "My dear fellow, I'm a serious actor."

That was that.

Dissolve to many years later. Finney, besides acting, is a very active producer — his company made the movie "Charlie Bubbles," which Finney directed and in which a young American girl named Liza Minelli made her film debut — and he was producing a play in London.

"I needed a record of organ music for one scene," he says. "I rang up Denis King, a friend, who used to be part of the King Brothers, which had been a very important singing group but then broke up. Anyhow, Denis said he would be delighted to make my organ music record.

"We went to a studio to make the record. And the man who ran the studio came up to me and said, 'Remember me? Fifteen years ago, I asked you if you wanted to make a record.'"

Anyhow, one thing led to another and the recording subject came up again. Finney said he didn't want to record songs that others had sung before, that the only way he'd even consider making a record would be if he could write his own. So he sat down and wrote some lyrics, and King put them to music. And the result is the album that's now out.

Is it the start of something big?

Finney laughs, and paces a few steps. Then he says he can't tell, it's too soon. He did sing his songs once before a live audience in England, and rather enjoyed the experience, but cannot yet tell if he's found a new career.

"Singing in front of people," he says, "was at once frightening and titillating at the same time.

"When you're acting on stage, or acting in a film, you have an automatic out-clause. If the thing goes badly, you can always blame it on the director or the writer or whatever. You are part of a group.

"But when you are up there, singing songs you have written yourself, there is no out-clause. It's just you. And, if you're bad, there's nobody to blame but yourself. In that way, being a singer is more difficult than being an actor."

Finney thinks it is conceivable that someday he might put together an act for Las Vegas. He has no such act yet, but the day might come when he'd give it a whirl.

The day will probably be a long time coming, if ever. Finney is a very busy actor.

He has a deal now, with England's National Theater. He does plays for them for 16 months straight, then has eight months off to pursue other avenues. He's in the middle of one of those eight-month periods now.

"I'm 41 now," Finney says. "I think this decade, when I'm in my 40s, is the decade when I must do my heaviest and strongest dramatic work on stage. I am at my physical peak now and you have to be strong and fit to do Shakespeare — why, Hamlet takes more than three hours and he talks a lot and it all ends up with a duel.

"You really have to be in shape for that. And the only way to keep in shape is to keep acting."

So he thinks he'll postpone anything other than acting — directing, which he'd love to do, and singing and everything else — at least until he hits 50.

As you can tell, Albert Finney loves acting. He always has. As a boy, growing up in Pulford, not far from Manchester, he was a movie nut.

CUDDLESOME CUBS — Actress Barbara Carrera shares the limelight with two frisky black leopard cubs in a scene from the movie, "The Island of Dr. Moreau." Burt Lancaster co-stars.

Piano recital slated

Sixteen piano students will present a recital in Pattison Hall, Scripps College, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday under the auspices of the teachers section of the Musicians Club of Pomona Valley. Admission is free.

Taking part will be Guy and Marc Bonaldo, David Brown, John Cordes, Scott Edwards, Edward Bratt, Pam Hailey, Liz Lin, Brenda and Laura Loberman, Cathy Morioka, Craig Poindexter, Liz Sable, Julius and Paul Tsai and Ann Yun.

Studios represented are those of Yvonne Gordon, Marguerite Green, Rizia Lin, Marion Stone and Eloise Wilder.

$11 million movie set on killer bees

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer Irwin Allen is lining up his cast for the $11 million dollar "Swarm."

The yarn about killer bees will feature Katharine Ross as an Air Force doctor and Richard Widmark as a general. Already cast are Michael Caine and Henry Fonda as scientists.

GARTH "WOODY" ELLWOOD

I occasionally receive material relating to the restaurant scene which I feel might be of interest to you. And since I'm on vacation now and doing my wanderings around the State of Kansas, I thought you might enjoy this bit of whimsy published by the Ore-Ida Company in a booklet entitled: "All-Rights and All-Wrongs: Eating Manners for Big Potatoes and Small Fries".

Noting that some of us become intimidated by the surroundings in posh restaurants, the booklet offers the following tips for the etiquette-conscious:

Don't droop in the soup — Chug not the chowder nor blow on the broth. Everyone knows that one sips soup silently; slurping and smacking one's lips are for drips. There are, however, other ways to blow your cool over consomme.

For instance, small oyster crackers may be dropped into the bowl, but larger crackers should not be crumbled into it. One should not blow in the bowl to temper the temperature, but one can easily exhale through parted lips over the spoon as it approaches the mouth. When the soup shows every promise of being good to the last drop, but that last drop is being elusive, one may tilt the bowl to simplify spooning, but tilt it away from you lest it land in your lap. Consomme may be consumed by drinking from the cup, provided it's two-handled.

Don't be chicken when it comes to chicken — When consuming chicken in one's kitchen, banqueting out of a bucket or barbecuing in one's backyard, there is no puzzle to partaking of poultry. One picks it up, pulls it apart and packs it in. This strategy, however handy, is scowled upon in high society.

Make no bones about it — gnawing, though natural, is noxious to many and formally fingering fowl is foul. Let not wings nor legs nor thighs thwart you. Spear firmly with your fork and sever at joint with knife, cutting through connective tissue. Once separated into its sundry sections, hold steady with fork and slice meat from bone with knife in the direction of the grain. Cut down to comfortable size and convey to mouth with fork. Whatever chicken cannot be removed in this manner is left abandoned to its bone.

There's nothing as weird as a pasta beard — When in pursuit of pasta, use your noodle. Steaming, sauced, succulent spaghetti; swirling, sinuous, snaky. Spaghetti is elusive; strands drip on their way to one's lips . . . With your left hand, hold a soup spoon on its side against the plate. With your right hand, hold fast to a fork.

Snare three or four strands of spaghetti in the tines of the fork; rest tips of tines gently against bowl of spoon. Slowly rotate fork, wrapping and winding spaghetti into a tidy coil. Lift fork. If an end has come undone, sever with your spoon. Scoop up some sauce, now up, up, up to your mouth. Ah, bravissimo!

The famished, the fearful and the fatigued may opt for alternative action. Use the side of your fork to slice spaghetti into bite-size bits. Scoop onto fork with the aid of Italian bread (chunks of which are also suited to sopping up sauce.)

Eating with a frog in your throat — Frogs' legs, when impossibly small (and they usually are), may be eaten with the fingers. Hold tightly at one end; place other end directly in mouth. Eat daintily never gnawing.

Pitting your wits against pits can be a seedy situation — Many innocent looking and inoffensive seeming foods are fraught with hidden hazards in the form of pits, seeds and stones.

Ripe olives, for instance, and grapes, cherries and other berries, persimmons, plums and pomegranates . . . biting unwittingly into one of these surprise packages can be a jaw-jolting experience and disposing of the danger can discompose your dignity. Smallish species, such as olives, cherries and plums, are eaten with the fingers in one bite. The stones, which now eweigh heavily on the tongue, are cleaned in the mouth, then gently ejected into the cupped hand or removed by fingers and placed on your plate.

More sizeable fruits, such as persimmons and pomegranates, are cut in half and spooned to the mouth. The pits, cleaned in the mouth, are delicately dropped onto the waiting spoon and carefully conveyed to the plate.

Don't eat lobster like a mobster — Come out of your shell and give seafood a crack. You know you are in for an ordeal when your meal is served with a choice of weapons that resemble a nutcracker, a nutpick, and a small fork.

Holding the lobster or crab steady with the left hand, twist off the large claws with the right hand. Use the special crackers to break the shell of the claws; pull apart with fingers. Extract meat with pick or fork; cut to bite-size. Dip with fork into butter or sauce provided. The smaller claws are pulled from the body with fingers and the meat is simply and silently sucked out.

The major portions of the lobster meat is found in the tail and the stomach cavity. Attack one side at a time. Spear with fork, lift with knife and remove from shell. Cut to size, swish through sauce and eat with fork. To break into the body of the crab, hold underside up, snap open; use both hands.

The green material located in the stomach cavity of lobsters is called the tommaley. A great delicacy, it is eaten with a fork. Much of this mess may be by-passed by ordering just the lobster tail or by asking your waiter to do the work for you.

Don't get strung out over pizza — Never tease the cheese or ax the anchovy; it's hard to be neatsa when eating a pizza. You are down at the local pizza parlour. The candles burn brightly in the Chianti bottles, casting a glow over the red-checked table cloth and the mural of Mount Vesuvius. The atmosphere is warm, even romantic. You raise your slice of pizza-with-everything-on-it in a salute, perhaps salivating slightly. And the mozzarella maddeningly behaves like bubble gum. You feel dumb.

One's initial impulse in this infuriating situation is to attempt to pull the pizza apart. Don't do it. Your arms aren't long enough, nor is the room dark enough. Instead, apply a knife to the sticky situation, cutting your way out of the mess. Should the pizza pull this same shameful sham in your teeth, simply scissor away. Eventually you will chew your way through, the only casualty your conversation. You can fastidiously choose to use fork and knife in your noshing, but be prepared to receive cutting remarks from pizza purists.

Dodgers get closer to pennant party

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Although they still have 61 games left to play in the season, it's beginning to look like the Dodgers had best invest in a bit of the bubbly.

L.A. took a big step towards a champagne celebration Thursday afternoon by edging the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 while second-place Cincinnati was dropping a wild 13-inning contest at Chicago.

Those two scores netted the Dodgers a whopping 12½-game lead in the Western Division standings going into tonight's series opener in Montreal.

Moreover, while the Dodgers seem to be emerging from their slump of some three weeks, it's becoming increasingly obvious that Cincy just doesn't have the pitching to challenge L.A.'s perch atop the heap in the West.

Tommy John, who has been the Dodgers' most effective starter of late, did the trick once again Thursday.

T.J. won a duel of veteran southpaws as he outpitched Philly's Jim Kaat. The win for John was his 11th of the year, one more victory than he had all of last season.

John, who has lost four games, also lowered his earned run average to 2.98 with his complete-game triumph.

"I think I'm throwing the ball as well as I ever have right now," John said afterward. "The Phillies are a real tough club for a lefty to pitch against, they've got a couple guys in there who can really crush the ball. But today I just didn't give in to them."

John surrendered only six hits and the Phillie run came on Garry Maddox's swinging bunt single in the fifth. T.J. fanned one and walked two.

Maddox' hit scored Bob Boone from third and tied the score at 1-1, and it stayed that way until some Dodger dramatics in the last of the ninth won it.

Bill Russell led off that frame vs. Kaat with a line drive into the left-field corner. The ball caromed off the wall on one hop and spun away from Phillie leftfielder Jerry Martin.

Russell, running all the way just did outleg Martin's throw to third. Russell's three-bagger was as exciting to skipper Tommy Lasorda as it was to the rest of the Dodger Stadium crowd of 39,123.

"At first I thought that ball was going out of here," Lasorda said, "then I thought he (Martin) was going to catch it, then I thought Russell was going to be out at third. All I could say was 'please make it!'"

Russell did, and that put Phillie manager Danny Ozark's back to the wall.

Ozark replaced the tiring Kaat with Gene Garber, and then ordered Garber to intentionally walk both Steve Garvey and Ron Cey.

With the bases loaded and no outs, it was Lasorda's turn for some strategy, and the Dodger skipper called on Reggie Smith to pinch-hit for rookie Joe Simpson.

Smith, battling Garber all the way after falling behind in the count 0-2, took a 3-2 delivery for ball four to force home Russell with the game-winner.

"There's a time to swing and a time not to," Smith said with a smile afterward. "That was the time not to."

DODGER DATA — Doug Rau (11-2) is slated to face the Expos' Steve Rogers (11-8) in tonight's game in Montreal. Rick Rhoden (11-7) will go on Saturday vs. Jackie Brown (7-7) and Burt Hooton (8-5) will face Stan Bahnsen (6-3) on Sunday. That Sunday game will be telecast on KTTV (Channel 11) beginning at 10:55 a.m.

Cey clouted his 20th homer of the year, and second in two nights, in the fourth off Kaat. That gave L.A. 124 homers this year in 101 games.

Simpson was leading the PCL in hitting (.360) at Albuquerque when he was recalled by the Dodgers Thursday. He got into Thursday's game after Dusty Baker was ejected by plate umpire Frank Pulli in the seventh inning after Baker hotly disputed a third strike call.

Thursday's crowd put the Dodgers over the 1.8 million mark in home attendance this year, tops in the majors.

Page's 25th steal ties mark

OAKLAND (AP) — Rookie Mitchell Page of the Oakland A's says he will attempt to break the American League record for consecutive stolen bases the first good chance he gets.

Page, a Cal Poly, Pomona product, tied the record held by Don Baylor of the California Angels when he stole his 25th straight as the A's defeated the Angels 6-4 Thursday night.

"It will depend on the game situation," Page said. "I'll steal when it helps our team rather than when it's just for me."

Page said the catcher for the other team will not determine when he attempts to break the record. "I've stolen bases against most of the good catchers so that won't make any difference."

Page also drove in two runs as the A's made it two victories in three tries against the Angels. He singled to drive in Marty Perez in the third inning and scored Sheldon Mallory with an infield out when the A's scored three runs off California relief pitcher Mike Barlow in the fourth inning.

Oakland took advantage of wildness by Angels' starting pitcher Wayne Simpson to score a run in the first inning. Simpson walked the first three batters he faced to start Oakland toward a 1-0 lead.

"I've never seen Simpson that wild," Manager Dave Garcia of the Angels said. "There was one time when he threw 14 straight balls."

Oakland starter Joe Coleman, now 2-1, held the Angels to two hits before coming out of the game in the sixth inning.

The Angels scored four runs in the sixth inning, two off Coleman and two off relief pitcher Dave Giusti.

Tony Solaita accounted for three of the California runs with his eighth homerun of the season.

Bobby Bonds drove in the other Angel run with a single.

The Angels return home tonight to open a nine-game homestand, as Paul Hartzell (4-6) meets the Boston Red Sox and Fergie Jenkins (7-7) at 7:30.

Cubs punish skidding Reds

By The Associated Press

The game was a strange one, in many ways, for the Chicago Cubs.

Rick Reuschel, normally a starter, came on in relief and beat Cincinnati 16-15 Thursday. He pitched just two-thirds of an inning and scored the winning run in the bottom of the 13th inning. It was his second victory over the Reds in their four-game series and his 10th without a loss at Wrigley Field.

The game marked the return to duty after 12 days of reliever Bruce Sutter, who pitched three innings, didn't allow a hit and struck out six.

The Cubs collected 24 hits against six Cincinnati pitchers, and there were a total of 11 home runs, tying a major league record, in the game which lasted 4 hours, 50 minutes.

Chicago used 21 players, the Reds 16, and three Cubs changed positions four times. Outfielder Bobby Murcer even played shortstop and second for a while when the Cubs ran out of infielders in the late innings.
fielders in the late innings.

Dave Rosello, shifting between second and shortstop, depending on whether a lefty or righty was batting, drove in the winning run. That made up for an error that had given the Reds a 15-14 lead in the top of the 12th.

And Chicago Manager Herman Franks was ejected in the ninth inning, but his game of musical Cubs paid off, leaving the Reds 12½ games behind Los Angeles in the National League's West Division.

"That's the greatest game I've ever seen," said Franks. "What a game to win!"

Reuschel, 15-3, who threw a five-hitter to beat the Reds 3-0 Tuesday, said: "I'm not tired. I got pumped up so quick, the adrenalin was really flowing. I'm just trying to get down now."

The Cubs hit six homers, two in the first inning, and the Reds smacked five, three in the first inning. The five homers in one inning by both teams also tied a major league record.

Bill Buckner and George Mitterwald had two homers each for the Cubs with Murcer and Jerry Morales also homering. Ken Griffey, Pete Rose, Johnny Bench, Mike Lum and Cesar Geronimo homered for the Reds.

"When I made that error, I was looking for a hole to jump into and hide," said Rosello. "But now I am so happy. I've never been happier in my life."

In other NL games, Los Angeles nipped Philadelphia 2-1, Montreal downed San Diego 5-4, Pittsburgh beat Houston 9-4 and St. Louis blanked Atlanta 3-0.

Notebook helps Diehl

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Terry Diehl has the first-round lead in the $200,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic, a secret notebook that helped him get there and no intention of revealing his methods.

The notebook contains the wit and wisdom of Ken Venturi, a former U.S. Open champion and now a television commentator.

"He's a tremendous guy, and he's made a world of difference in my game," Diehl said after his six-under-par 65 gave him a one-stroke edge in Thursday's opening round of the chase for a $40,000 first prize.

"I'm a much better overall player since working with Venturi," said Diehl, "but he made me vow not to tell anyone" precisely the nature of the help.

"I think he's been plagiarized a couple of times," Diehl said. "If you want to know what it's all about, ask Venturi."

The instructions, however, are scribbled in the little notebook the 27-year-old Diehl studies from time to time.

"I worked with him several days down in Florida," said Diehl, whose only victory came in his rookie season of 1974. "The first day, I made notes of 55 items. The second day 27. The third, about a dozen. I kept adding to it."

Diehl, who lost a playoff for this title a year ago, said he sought help from Venturi early this season. "My career was in a valley," he explained.

Since then, he said, "I haven't missed a cut since Doral (in March) and that's pretty good for me. I've played very steadily, very solidly."

His play over the last 11 holes bordered on the spectacular. He played those holes six under par and used only 12 putts in the stretch, once holing from a bunker.

Those heroics lifted him one stroke in front of J.C. Snead, a former Philadelphia champion who birdied two of his last three holes for a share of second, and Tom Kite, the man who scored that playoff victory over Diehl a year ago.

"I was kind of apprehensive," Kite said of his first appearance in the role of defending title-holder. "I didn't want to put too much pressure on myself, but I did want to get a good start. I'm very pleased that I played exceedingly well."

Danny Edwards and Bill Rogers were at 67 and the group at 68 included Don Pooley, Rod Curl, Mike Hill, Bob Gilder and Ray Floyd, a two-time winner this season.

He withdrew after an 81, his third consecutive round in the 80s.

"I just can't play," said Crenshaw, who took a two-stroke penalty for missing his tee time and later hit two balls out of bounds. "It's just awful. I'm in a deep, deep slump, I guess. I need some time off."

He said he'll skip the next event and try to relax, "play some tennis, maybe swim some. Anything but golf."

CAST OFF!

California Angels outfielder Joe Rudi finally gets his cast removed after 3½ weeks. According to his doctor, Rudi can start batting practice next week if everything goes okay, but he still won't be able to play for another 3 weeks. Rudi was hurt against Texas.

Rams look at passing

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — A long touchdown pass from quarterback Pat Haden to wide receiver Dwight Scales highlighted a seven-on-seven drill in the training camp of the Los Angeles Rams Thursday afternoon.

Scales, a second-year player from Grambling, has been hampered by a broken rib, according to a Rams' spokesman, but has been playing every day and performing impressively despite the injury.

Scales, Freeman Johns, a second-year player from Southern Methodist, and Billy Waddy, a rookie from Colorado are currently battling for the firststring berth formerly held by Harold Jackson, who hasn't signed a contract and isn't in camp.

Jackson is one of five veterans still missing. The others are guard Tom Mack, center Rich Saul, tight end Charles Young and linebacker Jack Reynolds. There was no further word on the status of the five Thursday.

Eighty-four players are currently in the Rams' camp.

The team held two drills Thursday, with temperatures soaring to near 100 degrees in the afternoon. Coach Chuck Knox said that many players are losing from seven to 10 pounds per practice because of the heat, but are putting the weight back on by drinking liquids.

There is a water break during each practice session, Knox said.

In addition to the two-a-day practice schedule, the Rams have been attending meetings after lunch and in the evenings this week. The team opens its NFL pre-season schedule against the Minnesota Vikings Aug. 6.

Sandoval gets scare winning close decision

LOS ANGELES — Pomona's "Superfly" survived his toughest ring test to date Thursday night at the Olympic Auditorium, but it wasn't easy.

Unbeaten sensation Alberto "Superfly" Sandoval made Alberto Morales of Tres, Palos, Mexico his 21st straight ring victim with a close but unanimous 10-round decision over the veteran scrapper in a spirited bantanweight bout.

The Olympic main event had originally been billed as a flyweight scrap but neither fighter could make the 112-pound limit. Both Sandoval and Morales weighed in at 113½ pounds.

The 29-year-old Morales, now 38-9-2, gave Sandoval a scare in the late going, rallying in the final three rounds to make it a close fight.

But the 21-year-old Pomonan had piled up enough of an edge in the early going to nab the victory.

The win for "Superfly" raised his hopes for a flyweight world championship bout before the end of the year. The Garey High product is currently ranked 10th in the world in the 112-pound class.

In Thursday's other 10-rounder at the Olympic, Alfredo Gonzalez of Mexicali, Mexico knocked out Raul Ochoa of Michoacan, Mexico at 2:30 of the fourth round.

Gonzalez is now 12-7-2 while Ochoa is 25-6.

The program commemorated the 35th anniversary of Aileen Eaton as a promotor at the Olympic.

Post 30 wins opener

By TIM CLARK
PB Correspondent

The 1977 American Legion District 18 baseball playoffs opened up Thursday evening with a bang. Locals Pomona Post 30 and Claremont Post 78 were both involved in a couple of shell-shockers, with Woody Hanson's Pomona club sizzling, and Jack Helber's Claremont team fizzling.

Sunday's game
District 18 championship game, Claremont-Mudd, noon.

Pomona came on strong in its opening game, blasting Arcadia 13-3, while Claremont was bombarded by West Covina 14-4.

Pomona (21-11-2) and West Covina will now square off in the Championship bracket today at the Claremont-Mudd diamond at 4 p.m. Claremont (22-15-1) and Arcadia meet in the losers bracket at the Pomona College field, also at 4 p.m.

Woody's Gems did it all Thursday, cranking out 15 hits while exploding for two big innings (a four-run seventh and a five-run ninth.) Pomona pitching, which is believed to be the best in the tourney, yielded only two earned runs and recorded nine strike-outs.

Post 30 held a slim one run lead through four innings, thanks to Brian Donahue's solo home-run in the second inning.

But any thoughts of a close one went down the tubes when Pomona jacked out 12 runs in the final five frames. Mike Keegan (.387), Chris Davis (.347), Larry Reyes (.389), and reserve Jeff Seamon all tallied at least two safeties along with Donahue (.342). And talk about running like crazy . . . Pomona swiped four of its six stolen bases in the five-run ninth!

Starter Tim Lambert (5-4) threw a decent five innings to pick up the win, fanning five and giving up three hits before giving way to relievers Cregg Handy and Aurelio Coronado.

Things just didn't start out too bright for Claremont. You knew it was going to be a long day when Edgewood High's All-Everything Sam Favata led off the game with homer. West Covina came right back in the third when Jeff Jones kissed a Leonard Peacock offering out of the park for a grand-slammer. Then . . . W.C. really drilled the locals in the FIFTH inning, smacking home seven runs! Imagine having to bat for five more innings when you're down 13-2. Hoo-boy.

District 20 makes Big League finals

OXNARD — The District 20 Big League All-Stars will square off here tonight at 5 p.m. for the Section I Big League title.

District 20 dropped its tourney opener here Tuesday by a 1-0 score to District 13, as District 13 scored the winning run on a wild pitch.

However, Ed Salas came back to fire a four-hitter Wednesday as District 20 beat District 63 by a 7-0 score. District 20 then won again Thursday, beating District 18 by a 5-1 score on strong relief hurling by Dave Olivas and Rick Beltran.

Dan Ross is the probable starter for the District 20 Big Leaguers tonight in their contest vs. District 13.

Legion playoff set to start

The District 25 American Legion baseball crown will go on the line starting tonight at Ontario's John Galvin Park, as Montclair and Ontario will square off in a best two-of-three series.

Tonight's contest at Galvin is set to start at 8 p.m., as is the second game of the series on Saturday. If a third game is necessary, it will be played Sunday at Galvin beginning at 6 p.m.

The District 25 winner this weekend will advance to a regional Legion tourney, and if successful there to the State Tourney at Yountville, set to go August 13-17.

W. German kickers impress

By BRENT SHYER
PB Correspondent

A well-disciplined Soligen, West Germany soccer team outlasted a feisty South Torrance High team, 2-1, in an exhibition contest Thursday evening at Webb School in Claremont.

The Soligen squad opened the scoring late in the first 40-minute half. Georg Lipinski took the ball from the right side of the goal and made a pass to Ralf Pagel, who knocked the ball onto the turf and booted it by South Torrance's goalkeeper Jeff Mapes.

Udo Klimach raised the West Germany team's score to 2-0 six minutes into the second half, when he stole the ball in front of the net from Torrance's Kyle Hickman and drilled it home.

About midway through the final half, South Torrance averted a possible shutout by scoring on a shot that deflected past Soligen's goalie Uwe Lindemann.

Davis Moore picked up the ball, as he was camped near the net, and booted it towards Lindemann. The goalkeeper made the initial stop on the play, but somehow he fumbled the ball and, with some momentum, it trickled into the goal.

South Torrance's only other real prime opportunity to get on the scoreboard was in the second half, when Bill Colby tried to jam the ball into the net following a wild scramble, but Olaf Hellmann slid in front of him to deny a possible goal.

Soligen's Werner Kurzrock, who has fine speed, had two excellent chances to score, but both times he shot the ball wide of the net.

The team from West Germany consists of 22 boys (15-19 years old) and six adults (coaches and chaperons). The boys and the adults are being housed mainly in Claremont, although one boy is staying in a Pomona home, and they will play two more games at Webb during their stay.

On Saturday at 6 p.m., the 1975-'76 Claremont High School soccer team will take on Soligen, while on Tuesday, August 2, boys from the homes where the players are staying will meet their Soligen "brothers" in what figures to be a fun contest also at 6.

L.V. cops tourney

The La Verne Little League Senior Minor team won the Pomona Senior Minor Tournament at Ralph Welch Park Thursday night, bombing the Pomona City squad in the finals, 15-0.

La Verne went unbeaten in the tourney.

Sam Kason hurled a one-hitter at City to notch the win, Roy Botsford picking up the lone Pomona safety. John Carlos, Don Hernandez and Tim Morris led a 14-hit La Verne attack with the only extra-base hits in the contest.

State Parks going strong despite drought conditions

SACRAMENTO — "All state parks, beaches, and recreation areas are still serving the people of California," State Parks and Recreation Director Herbert Rhodes said.

"Low water levels have forced some changes in boat launching services, but boats can still be launched at all the state recreation areas at inland reservoirs. High fire danger has forced us to close portions of some state parks, but the campgrounds are still open."

At Lake Oroville, 70 miles north of Sacramento, boats can be launched from five locations: two temporary launch ramps and three old roads that once traversed the ground that has become the lake bottom. Services are normal at Thermalito Forebay, 5 miles downstream from Oroville Dam.

At Folsom Lake, 20 miles east of Sacramento, temporary launch ramps are in service at Brown's Ravine and at Beals Point. A third launching site, at Dyke 8, has recently become unusable because of the receding water level. Services are normal at Lake Natoma, 2 miles southwest of Folsom Dam.

The boat launching ramps at Clear Lake State Park, 100 miles north of San Francisco, are closed because of the low water level, but car-top boats can be launched.

The low water levels, Rhodes said, have not affected the water supply systems for drinking and other personal use.

Boat launching continues normal or near-normal at Lake Perris State Recreation Area southeast of Riverside: Lake Elsinore State Recreation Area south of Riverside: Silverwood Lake State Recreation Area north of San Bernardino; Millerton Lake, Turlock Lake, and San Luis Reservoir State Recreation Areas in the San Joaquin Valley; and Colusa-Sacramento River state Recreation Area north of Sacramento.

Mount Diablo State Park, 15 miles southeast of Concord in Contra Costa County, is subject to closure on a day-to-day basis because of high fire danger. Park rangers there now take direct weather readings twice a day to determine the fire danger and decide whether to close the park or restrict its use.

Portions of several state parks in the Big Sur area in Monterey County are closed the rest of the fire season, but the campgrounds remain open.

Rhodes said, "We will keep our state parks, beaches, and recreation areas open and provide maximum visitor services as long as possible without endangering the public and the park resources."

Most state park campgrounds are on the statewide computerized reservation system operated by Ticketron. Campsites may be reserved as early as 30 days in advance and as late as Saturday for camping the following Friday.

To learn the address of the nearest Ticketron outlet, in San Diego, phone (714) 565-9947; in Los Angeles, phone (213) 670-1242; in San Francisco, phone (415) 788-2828; and in Sacramento, phone (916) 445-8828.

Persons who find it inconvenient to reach a Ticketron terminal in person may mail a reservation request and total fees to Ticketron, P.O. Box 26430, San Francisco, CA 94126. Applications will be accepted as early as 40 days in advance. Such requests will be held and processed on the 30th day prior to the first night requested, and the reservations will be mailed. Application forms are available at Ticketron outlets and units of the State Park System.

Striper project a hit

A total of 4,956 striped bass were tagged by the Department of Fish and Game in the San Joaquin River near Antioch this spring. Only a single boat fished this year and its catch was 48 per cent greater than for the same boat in 1975 when 3,358 bass were tagged.

In the past, fish were tagged at two locations: Clarksburg on the Sacramento River where they were caught with fyke traps, and near Antioch on the San Joaquin River where two boats used gill nets to catch fish.

David Kohlhorst, associate fishery biologist in charge of the DFG's striped bass and sturgeon project, said that tagging effort was reduced to one boat this year because the large-scale tagging program of previous years has fulfilled its purpose of providing baseline information on population size, annual recruitment (number of fish reaching legal size per year), harvest and survival.

While a tagging program similar to this year's will be continued in the future, large numbers of fish (10,000-15,000) will be tagged only in years when recruitment is expected to be either very high or very low.

This week's trout plants

Barring adverse weather, water or road conditions, the following lakes and streams, listed by county, will be restocked this week with catchable-sized rainbow trout from Department of Fish and Game hatcheries:

LOS ANGELES — Crystal Lake, Little Rock Reservoir, Upper Piru Creek (Frenchmen's Flat).

SAN BERNARDINO — Big Bear Lake, Gregory Lake, Lytle Creek (Middle and North Forks), Santa Ana River, Santa Ana River (South Fork).

SAN DIEGO — Cuyamaca Reservoir.

NOTE: The water level at Castaic Lake is dropping and the launching ramp is now down to four lanes. There are boat launching problems at Pyramid or Perris, the two other California Aqueduct lakes scheduled to be drawn down. Water levels are low but launching facilities are operational at lakes Cachuma, Casitas and Piru.

Deer outlook good

Deer hunting prospects are rated better than last year in the Southern California portion of the early deer season, which opens Saturday, Aug. 6, and continues through Sept. 18, says the Department of Fish and Game.

The early season area extends along the coast and adjacent areas from the northern boundary of Mendocino County southward to the counties of Santa Barbara and Ventura and a small northwest corner of Los Angeles County. It is described as Zone A in the 1977 hunting regulations booklet available free wherever hunting licenses are sold.

Bag and possession limit for the early season is two bucks, forked horn or better. Shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset.

DFG field personnel predict that, barring access problems caused by emergency fire closures, hunter success and the total deer take should be higher than last year in Santa Barbara and Ventura counties and about the same in the early season portion of Los Angeles County.

They base the prediction on below-par forage and water conditions that should concentrate the deer in the remaining areas where adequate food and water are still available.

Last year hunters in Santa Barbara County took 792 deer, up from 578 in 1975; Ventura County hunters shot 172 deer, down from 189 in 1975; and Los Angeles County hunters during the early season bagged 14 deer, up from 12 in 1975.

Here is the DFG's appraisal of hunting conditions:

—Range conditions: Because of below-average rainfall this year, there has been poor forage production and many watering areas have dried up. Food and water conditions are bad and may get worse as the season progresses.

—Location of deer: Because of these poor food and water conditions, deer will be concentrated in the better areas. They will probably be moving around more during daylight hours.

—Fawn survival and buck carryover: Thanks to some spring rains, fawn survival has been good so far and buck carryover is slightly above normal. Fall rains are needed, however, to keep these deer populations going. A good buck harvest should reduce competition for the available food and water. Bucks coming from the Frazier Mountain area in Ventura County will be in the velvet. In the Colson Canyon area most antlers should be hard.

—Access and fire hazard: Because of drought conditions, fire hazard is extremely high in all areas. The U.S. Forest Service may invoke emergency closures if hot, dry weather conditions continue. Areas open to the public in the Los Padres National Forest are the same as last year. Main access to the forest in Ventura County is Highway 33. In Santa Barbara County, the main access is via Highway 166. Information on secondary road access may be obtained at Forest Service ranger stations and offices. Road conditions in the back country will be very dry but should be okay for passenger cars. Hunters are cautioned not to block fire access roads or to camp at stock watering tanks.

—Outlook by area: In Santa Barbara County, hunting should be better than average because of the good buck carryover and the concentration of deer near water and feed. A good number of legal bucks should be taken at such areas as Figueroa Mountain, Miranda Ridge, Colson Canyon and the old Wellman Burn.

In Ventura County most public hunting will be in the northern part of the county because of extensive private land holdings in the southern portion. Most popular hunting areas are likely to be Mt. Pinos and Frazier Mountain. The Ventura County buck kill has been declining slowly: 203 in 1974; 189 in 1975 and 172 last year. The take is expected to be higher this year because of the good buck carryover and the liklihood of deer concentrations around the better food and water areas.

In Los Angeles County the early deer season area comprises about 55,000 acres lie within the Los Padres and Angeles National Forests, however, and this area will be open to hunters with access via Forest Service roads. Deer are scattered through this range and hunters may take anywhere between 10 and 20 during the early season.

Advice to hunters: The back country is extremely dry. Bring plenty of water. Don't over-exert; take frequent rests. Be very careful with all flammable material. Take along a rattlesnake kit. Make sure of your target before you shoot. Skin and dress out your deer immediately after the kill. Prop the carcass open to air out. Use deer bags to protect the meat from flies and yellowjackets. And finally, leave a clean camp.

Anti-hunters anger S.C

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — From the governor to garbage collectors, thousands of South Carolinians regard the opening day of the dove season in early September as an unpaid legal holiday.

Not only is the opening-day dove shoot a sporting must, it's also a social occasion. People from all walks of life mingle around blackened kettles of bubbling catfish stew and al fresco sideboards ladened with beverages not known to improve shooting proficiency.

No wonder, then, the South Carolina Wildlife Commission is up in arms against what it regards as a threat by a national "anti-hunting" organization to this time-honored tradition.

Last week the commission, governing body of the South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department, appealed to dove hunters to help head off a possible effort by the Friends of Animals organization to ban dove hunting in September.

The New York-based FOA, headed by author Cleveland Amory, contends September shoots kill off millions of young doves needed for breeding purposes.

Not so, says the Wildlife Commission. The commission concedes, however, that many of the approximately three million doves "harvested" by South Carolina hunters each year were born in the year of their death.

"Doves have a real high reproduction potential and also a short life span," said Brock Conrad, chief of game management for the wildlife department. "Studies show that the annual turnover rate is 70 to 80 per cent, whether they are hunted or not."

In other words, according to Brock, about 75 per cent of the dove population has a life expectancy of one year or less, and hunting has little if anything to do with the number of birds that will be around the following year.

Although doves don't range very far in comparison to ducks and some other birds— and some doves never leave home at all—they are migratory. That gives the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, a division of the Department of the Interior, authority to establish a time framework within which states must set their hunting seasons.

South Carolina's three-part season will open Sept. 3—unless Friends of the Animals obtains an injunction against the Fish and Wildlife Service to block dove hunting that early in the fall.

"Although we don't know if Friends of Animals will get an injunction to try to stop our September dove hunting, we still should make South Carolina sportsmen aware of what is going on," said J.Drake Edens of Columbia, a member of the state commission.

The commission is urging South Carolina hunters to write Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus and support the hunting framework proposed by the Fish and Wildlife Service for the coming dove season.

The spicy cinnamon for cinnamon toast and apple pie comes from the ground-up bark of the cinnamon tree, which grows in such warm lands as the West Indies and SriLanka.

To harvest cinnamon, the lower branches are cut down and the thin, smooth bark is carefully peeled off and then dried in the sun. As the bark dries, it curls up and turns light brown.

The flavor we enjoy in cinnamon comes from a fragrant oil found in the bark. Cinnamon oil is used in flavoring toothpaste and candy.

All spices come from plants, but they do not come from the same part of a plant. Pepper to season food comes from the crushed, dried berries of the pepper plant. Nutmeg and mace both come from the large, peach-like fruit of the nutmeg tree. Cloves are the dried flower buds of the clove tree. And the ginger in gingerbread comes from the dried-up roots of the ginger plant.

FASHION JEWELRY TRENDS FOR FALL '77

The woman who can't find her fashion niche this Fall is just not trying, the experts say. Whatever your chosen role — siren, sporty, ultra feminine or tailored, there's a place for you in the fashion picture. What's more, jewelry will help you accent your chosen image, the Jewelry Industry Council reports.

There's romance and drama in jewelry that takes its inspiration from ancient Egypt, circa 1350 B.C. Hammered gold neckplates, pendants in the shape of steles or pyramids, rigid snakechain bracelets with asp heads, upper arm bracelets — they are all part of the Egyptian look so popular now. The artifacts from the King Tut treasures, now touring the country on loan from Egypt, put the spotlight on gold. Include with this trend the authentic mummy bead necklaces worn by both men and women.

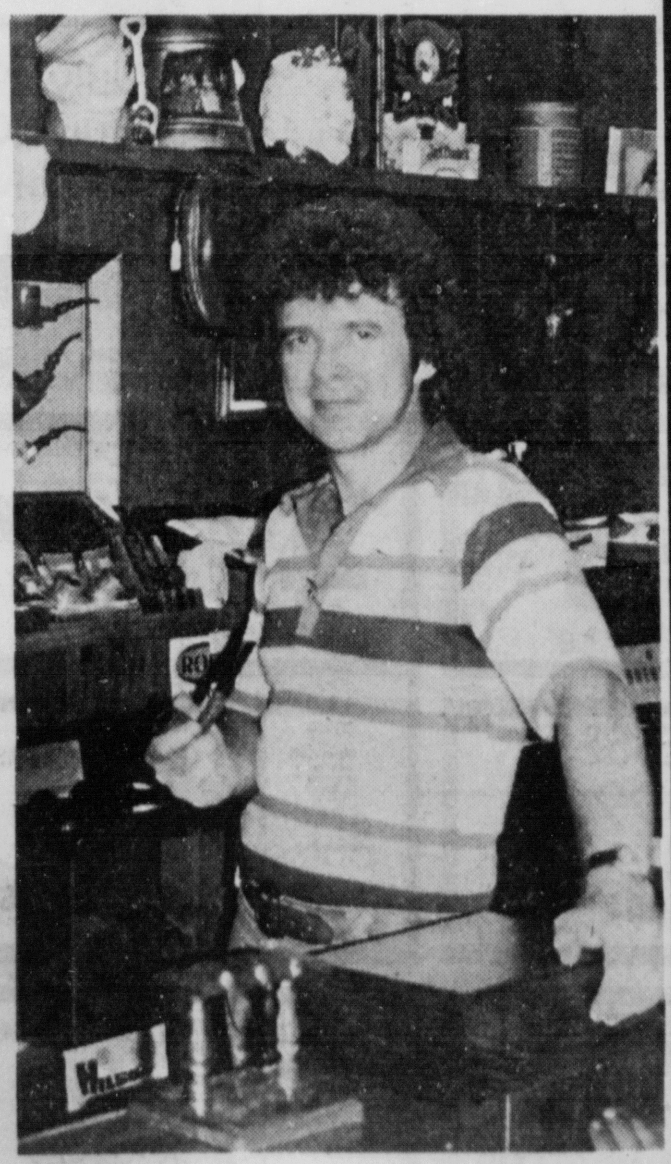
Stickpins, in gold or silver sport opals, tiger's eye, cat's eye, chrysolite, jade, ivory, turquoise and cultured pearls. Wear these stickpins with the new soft cowl necklines, on a tailored suit lapel, or on an ascot. Match your stickpin to stud earrungs.

Chains are the strongest link in the new jewelry trends. There are chains in every design — serpentine, square, box, s-link, and crescent link. Chains appear in gold or silver, and often show diamond, colored stone or gold bars in station chains. Chains range from bold to gossamar fine, with one — the "throat thread" making fashion news. This is an ultra-fine chain, with tiny heart or star motifs in gold, wound around the neck.

Another highlight of Fall jewelry fashions is the trend toward jewelry for the hair, says the Jewelry Industry Council. Tiny barrettes, with single-set stones, or with a pave of diamonds or rhinestones will sparkle for late day and evening. Innovative women will wear their favorite stone pendant centered on their forehead, and anchor the slim chain in their hairdo for a truly dramatic effect.

It may be the Fall of the year, but rosebuds and other floral pins in gold and silver will be bursting out all over — in pendants, pierced earrings, necklaces, rings and matching bracelets. Some roses will have a sparkling diamond dew drop, and some will have a glossy finish, while others will have a linen or filigree surface. Carved ivory roses are part of this look.

There is a richness to bead necklaces in blue, green, brown, amber and ivory, and they take on a longer look, rather than the 15 inch lengths of the past few months. Twenty-four and thirty inches are the most popular necklace lengths for Fall. Pendants show free form or geometric designs in gold and silver.



SKIP ANDERSON, manager of The Tobacconist suggests you stop in and see their fine assortment of products that will fill your smoking needs.
